In international trade, the shortest distance between two points is not a straight line.

It's 867-5542.

We're what some people would call aggressive.

Which, loosely translated, means we're really on the move.

And we are.

With established ties in the U.S., Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Hong Kong, Japan, Australia, the Caribbean, Mexico and Latin America. And in many other nations.

Which means that when you want to know something we know how, when, and where to find it.

And often, it's only a call or a telegram away.

But if it's further we're still willing to find it.

Because we think there's as much in international trade for us as there is for you.

So when you call 867-5542 (Toronto) or 877-6999 (Montreal), you've only reached the start of our modern communications network.

Instead of the end of it.

HANDY & HARMAN have been suppliers of precious metals in industry since 1867. Starting as bullion dealers, then servicing the silversmithing and gold jewellery crafts. HANDY & HARMAN produce the finest silver anodes for the electroplater and are constantly researching the sterling silver uses. In karat golds, H&H "SATIN GOLD" is the first choice of the successful jewellery manufacturer. HANDY & HARMAN pioneered silver brazing alloys, used in industry. H&H alloys are the standard for all government, military and trade association specifications. Working through design and production engineers we have ensured the place of silver brazing alloys in profitable manufacturing. Today's project is the use of precious metal "BI-METALS", where the best of two worlds—precious metal properties on base metals—is the current goal of industry. We have assumed leadership in this field. We are ready to demonstrate where our wealth of experience and the best in precious metal alloys can aid your production. All we ask is the opportunity.

We have an opening for businessmen in a hurry.

Our Commerce Depository is great for businessmen who want to deposit cash or cheques, day or night.

It's a time-saver because you don't have to enter the bank. It's a mind-saver because you don't have to keep large sums of money on your premises overnight.

For further information see your Commerce manager. And pick up a copy of our "Special Corporate Services" booklet. It details the many things we do for businessmen.

The Royal Bank is in business.

Not just in banking. In business.

In the same way in which you are in business: marketing products and services—competitively.

You know the most important of our products: money.

But we're in the business of helping you in many other ways. With world-wide credit information, for instance. Or export market information—about any country, anywhere, and any worthwhile firm in that country.

Since we're close to every business community in Canada, and hundreds more abroad, we know the people you'd like to meet and talk to—businessmen, professionals, public servants; we can help you with acquisitions and mergers, or to find out about plant locations, or negotiate a foreign financing problem.

So you'll do well to think of us not just as a bank, but as a bank that's in business: in the business of serving you, because we can understand your problems, talk your language, think like you do. And act just as quickly.

ROYAL BANK

The Helpful Bank

INTRODUCTION

CANADIAN TRADE INDEX has been the authoritative guide to buying and selling in Canada for over 70 years. It contains a comprehensive list of Canadian manufacturers having more than a local distribution for their products, irrespective of membership in The Canadian Manufacturers' Association. The INDEX always keeps up-to-date with the buying and selling needs of the times and it can be safely stated that it is the foremost directory of its kind in Canada today.

This new edition is designed to give you a detailed account of over 13,000 manufacturing companies across Canada. Listed for your easy reference are company name, address, names and titles of operating executives, branch offices and plants, brand names, parent and subsidiary companies, foreign representatives, number of employees, a geographical breakdown of manufacturing establishments by province and city and a finely classified directory of Canadian made products.

With approximately 10,000 detailed product classifications (indexed in Section F with French or Spanish translations) prospective purchasers will be able to get in touch at once with manufacturers of the goods desired. Where specialized information is needed, buyers are invited to call in the services of the Commercial Intelligence Department of the Association. It is suggested that importers abroad should first communicate with the nearest Canadian Government Trade Commissioner, consulting the list of their addresses in Appendix I of the Export Section. Representatives of overseas firms visiting Canada are invited to call at the Head Office of the Association where they will be given every possible assistance.

Users of the INDEX will find the regular advertising sections invaluable in supplementing the information contained in the alphabetical and classified sections. Page numbers of display advertisements are indicated in the alphabetical and product listings of companies which advertise. In addition, individual advertisements appear in the classified product section. Your attention is also drawn to the Classified Advertising Section beginning on page G-8 and the Service advertisements beginning on page G-1.

At the beginning of each section you will find a detailed description of how the INDEX may be used to its fullest advantage.

The publishers wish to thank the manufacturers, government departments, and other organizations who have furnished information upon which this book is based.

The Editor

From our vantage point, you get an excellent view of what's happening in banking and business around the world.

At Toronto Dominion, our service doesn't end at the Canadian borders. We realize that in these days of international expansion business requires up-to-the-minute information for markets at home and abroad.

So we keep abreast of the times by providing our customers with authoritative information on business conditions, markets, taxes, foreign exchange, and trade regulations around the world.

And all these facts are right at your finger tips when you call a representative at the Toronto Dominion Bank. Personally, or through branch offices and correspondents around the world, he will arrange meetings with industrial leaders, letters of credit, financing, and all the business details vital to trade and travel.

Our International Banking Division can give you an excellent look at business in just about any part of the world.

Come on up and have a look.

Get the point?

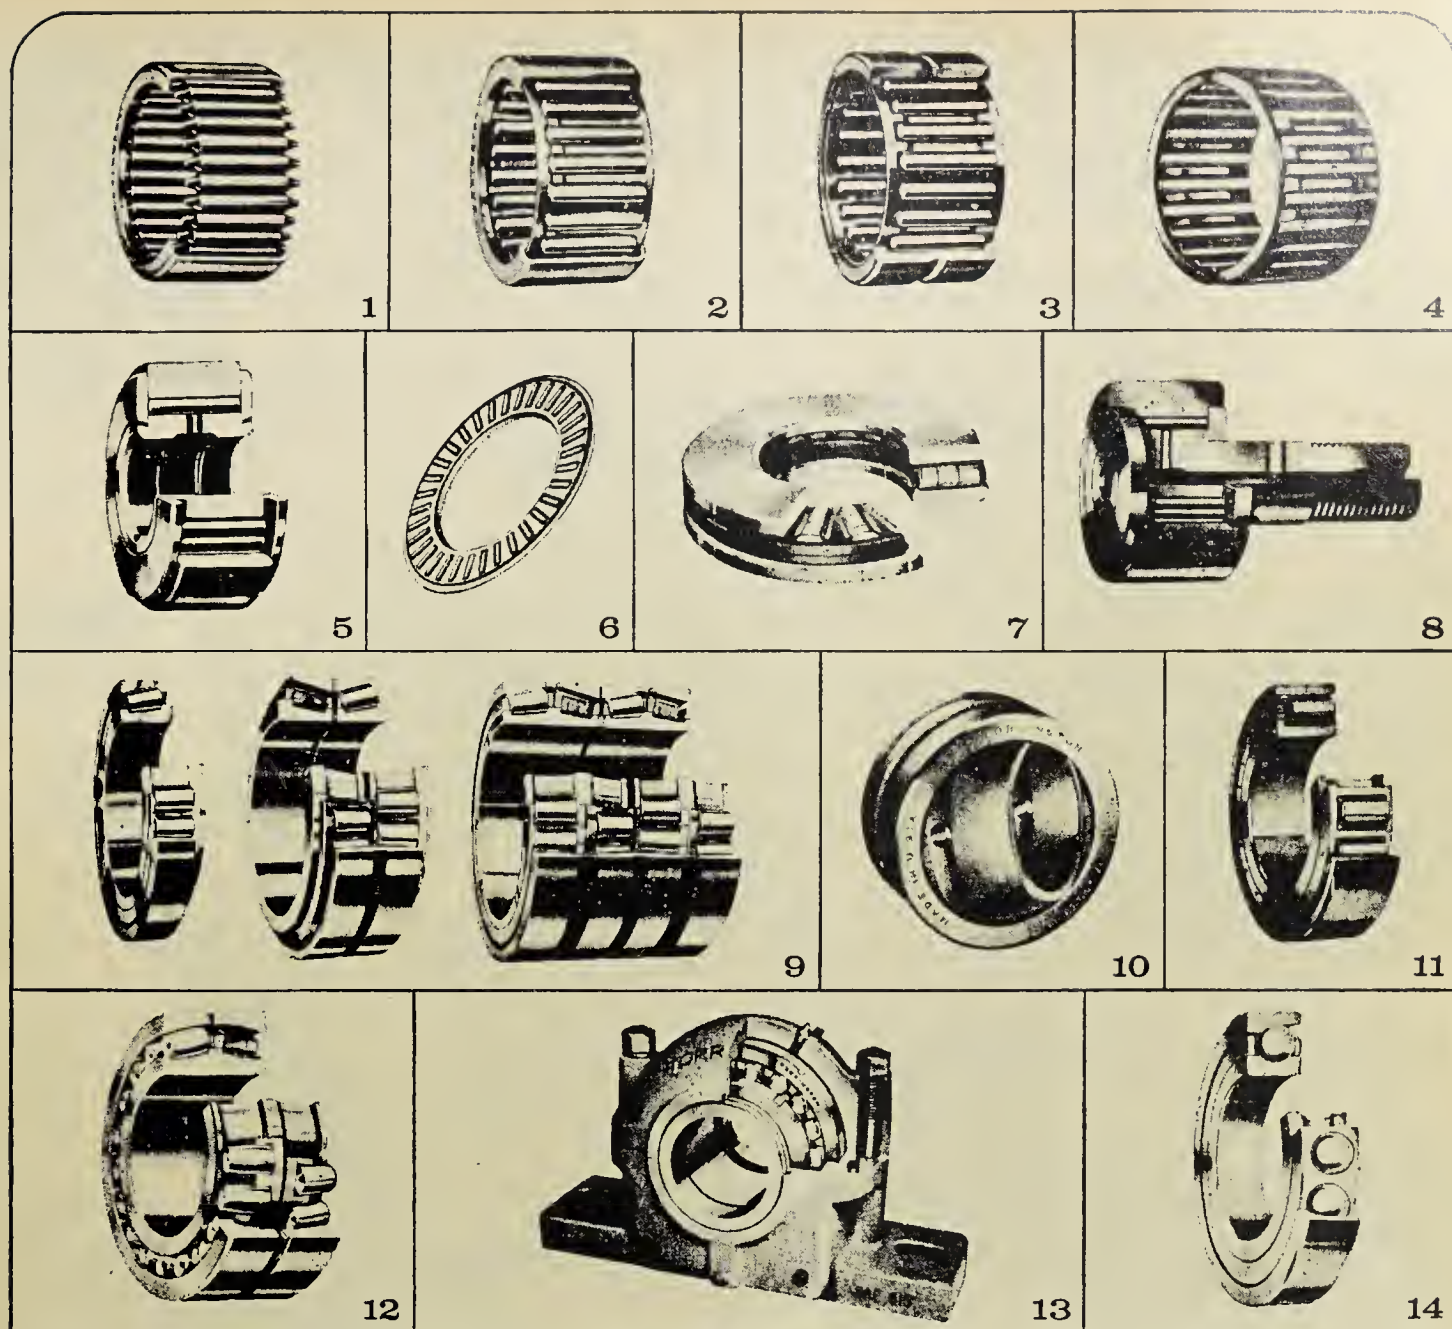

The point is, our Needle Division can supply any kind of knitting, tufting, felting or sewing needle you may need. In any size or shape. We make over 30,000 different needles, not just to keep busy, but to keep our customers happy about more efficient production. Less downtime. Fewer rejects. More first quality, saleable merchandise. And handsomer profits. Our Surgeons' needles provide the precision needed in the operating room, where needle construction and design often become a matter of life and death. There's really no end to our needle diversification, because if you've got the idea (no matter how unique or unusual) we'll design the needle to execute it. For a complete range of needles you can depend on — depend on Torrington. Contact our Needle Division, Bedford, Quebec. 514-248-3316

THE TORRINGTON COMPANY LIMITED

PROGRESS THROUGH PRECISION

MONTREAL, QUE. — BEDFORD, QUE. — VANCOUVER, B. C. — TORONTO, ONT.

Only one company—Torrington—can supply you with this complete range of antifriction bearings.

(1) Drawn Cup Needle Bearing. Maximum radial capacity in minimum cross section. Easily positioned by press fit.

(2) Drawn Cup Roller Bearing. For high speeds and long, pregreased service life. Unit construction means easy assembly.

(3) Heavy-Duty Roller Bearing. Combines high-speed performance, long pregreased service life, high shock resistance. Press or slip fit installation.

(4) Cage and Roller Assembly. Self-contained unit holds rollers in place, permits ease of handling and installing.

(5) Track Roller Bearing. Used as roller under heavy loads at slow speeds. Corrosion protection is insured by chrome-plating the outer diameter and cadmium-plating other exposed surfaces.

(6) Needle Thrust Bearing. Specifically for thrust loads in restricted space. Runs directly on adjacent hardened and ground surfaces, or on standard thrust races.

(7) Roller Thrust Bearing. For heavy loading parallel to shaft axis.

(8) Cam Follower. Regular or sealed. High-capacity antifriction performance on cam-controlled or track-type equipment. Withstands heavy rolling, shock loads.

(9) Single-Row, Two-Row & Four-Row Tapered Roller Bearings. Regular or steep-angle design. Top bearing efficiency in handling severest thrust and radial loads. Advanced heat-treating insures high impact resistance and optimum wear.

(10) Self-Aligning Ball Bushing. Accommodates misalignment while supporting heavy radial, thrust or combined loads.

(11) Cylindrical Roller Bearing. For heavy radial loads. Controlled contour rollers eliminate roller end stress concentration, insure uniform load distribution.

(12) Spherical Roller Bearing. Self-aligning: provides both radial and thrust capacity. Insures top efficiency, optimum service life under heavy loading and misalignment conditions.

(13) Spherical Roller-Bearing Pillow Block. Split housing for ease of installation, inspection. Suitable for grease or oil bath lubrication. Optional stabilizing ring for fixed or float bearing positioning.

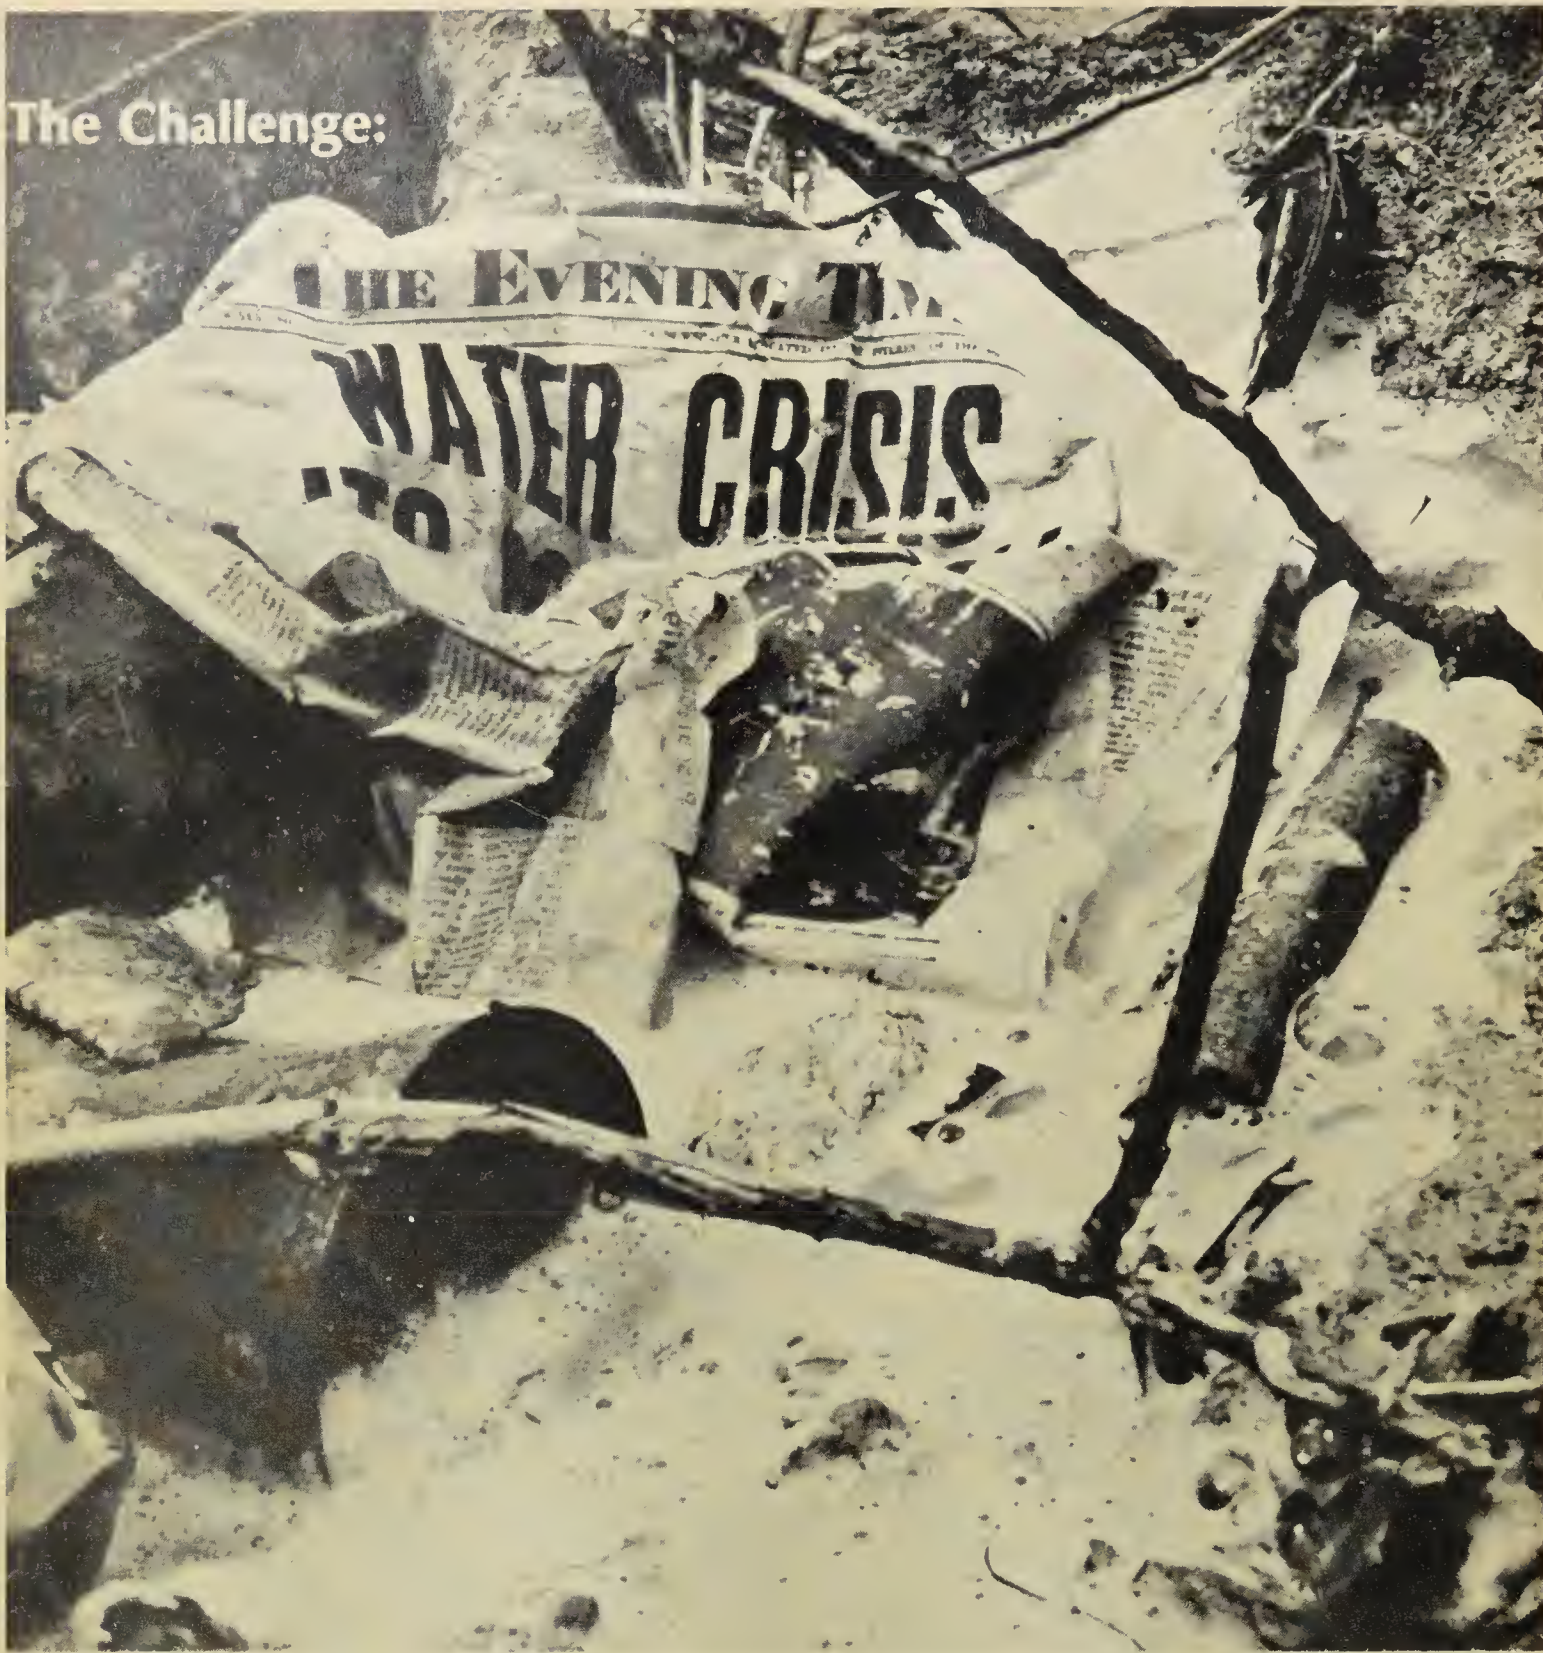

(14) Ball Bearing. Designed for high radial capacity. Can take combined radial and moderate unidirectional thrust loads.

The Challenge:

In the last 100 years, we've watched our rivers and lakes die; poisoned by burgeoning populations and booming industry. In a world four-fifths covered with oceans, we're in danger of running out of usable water. Crane is concerned about this 30 billion dollar problem. Concern has led to involvement. In the battle against water pollution, Crane's super-efficient Micro-strainers are making tons of water fit to drink. Crane ion-exchange technology now saves millions of gallons of industrial water every hour. Crane research, giving priority to the water problem, is nearing breakthroughs in such areas as improved desalination and the treatment of industrial and municipal effluents. In water treatment and pollution control, Crane is attacking the problem with our own special brand of creative know-how. It's a growing challenge. But as the challenge grows, so grows Crane.

when it's a
 better make it FORGED!

When much is expected of a part, great strength, high resistance to shock, long service with complete reliability — all without undue bulk, and at an economical cost — forging is the method.

The forging process develops the maximum mechanical properties in a material — greater values in these properties than are obtainable by any other metalworking process.

Allow a Dominion Forge engineer to evaluate your requirements. As one of the largest forging manufacturers in Canada we are geared for massive quantities for the automotive industry as well as a small industry's requirement.

one of the most respected canadian names in forest industry equipment

Working with Canada's major industry, Forano has aided in designing and developing improved methods of log processing, mechanical wood-handling, and slashing and sorting equipment to cope with ever-increasing production demands.

Over the past 18 years, in the pulp and paper industry alone, Forano has supplied more than 50 major custom-built wood-handling, sorting and slashing systems for top-production Canadian mills.

Founded in 1873, Forano offers extensive design and manufacturing facilities plus accumulated know-how acquired through years of working with Canada's forest industry. Why not learn more about Forano? Your inquiries will receive immediate attention.

V-DRIVE VERSATILITY

Choose Ultra-V[®] or Conventional V

Bettger offers Ultra-V and Conventional V-drives from stock in a wide variety of sizes. Compact Ultra-V drives permit higher speeds, provide savings in weight and space.

Mount sheaves 4 ways with "Better-Grip" bushings to meet all installation requirements. Tapered, interchangeable bushings provide a clamp fit.

ULTRA-CON SCR DRIVES

are compact, totally-enclosed for use in hostile atmospheres. To 6½ hp at 2375 rpm. Solid state.

VARIABLE SPEED DRIVES

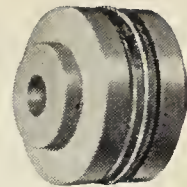

MECHANICAL DRIVES

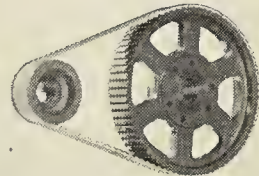

provide freeze-free operation in motion control (½ to 60 hp at 1750 rpm) and stationary control types (FHP to 375 hp at 1750 rpm).

SURE-FLEX[®] COUPLINGS

are easy to install, need no lubrication. 4-way flexing action soaks up shock and vibration, takes misalignment and end float. Available to 870 hp.

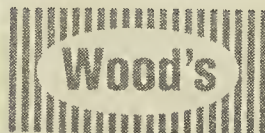

TIMING BELT DRIVES

provide non-slip action, need no lubrication. Speeds to 10,000 fpm, capacities to 600 hp. Equipped with Better-Grip tapered bushings.

QUIGLEY Products

HYTEMPITE — "The World's Standard High Temperature Cement," famous for its economy of application, strong bond, uniformity and dependability.

INSULAG — a superior plastic refractory insulator and sealer for lagging interior and exterior surfaces of high temperature equipment.

PLASTIC INSULCRETE — a light weight cellular insulating refractory concrete for furnace linings, heat shields and kindred uses.

HYAL PLASTIC INSULCRETE is a 3,000° F. lightweight, high alumina, low iron content, insulating refractory concrete with high bearing strength.

CHROMIX — A chrome base plastic ramming material with excellent resistance to high temperatures, abrasion, and chemically active slags.

Q-CHROME — neutral chrome-base refractory with very high fusion point for lining and repairing steel furnaces, soaking pits, smelting furnaces, etc.

Q-CHROMASTIC — plastic super-refractory used as a wash or veneer coating for furnace walls.

HEARTH-CRETE — special patented chrome-base castable refractory of outstanding merit for building monolithic hearths or bottoms in forging and other steel heating furnaces.

ACID-PROOF CEMENTS — plastic, ready-mixed acid-proof and heat-resisting cements for bonding and repairing of acid-resisting masonry structures.

Q-SEAL — plastic, expansive joint sealing compound for threaded, flange, gasket, and metal-to-metal joints.

DAMIT — makes and keeps joints tight. Dams leaks in water, air, gas, and low pressure steam lines. Lubricates as it seals . . . prevents "Frozen Joints."

TRIPLE-A PROTECTIVE COATINGS — for decoration and lasting protection of all surfaces . . . for prevention of corrosion due to steam, moisture, alkalis, chemical fumes, and other destructive agents.

BEARIUM METAL

BEST
BEARING

now available in Canada

Even where water must be used as the only lubricant, BEARIUM METAL does not seize or score the shaft. The reason is that BEARIUM METAL, because of its superior frictional properties, is self-lubricating. Secret of its amazing performance is due to the uniform distribution of microscopic particles of lead within the copper-tin grains rather than between the grain boundaries as found in ordinary bronzes. So if you have a bearing requirement which calls for dependable, trouble-free performance—then BEARIUM METAL is your best buy in bearing bronze.

Non-Seizing and Non-Scoring . . . Long Life . . . High Compressive Strength . . . Self-Lubricating . . . Low Coefficient of Friction . . . resistant to Shock Loads . . . Sound, Uniform Structure . . . Free-Cutting.

Available in rough cast bars, individual castings and completely machined parts.

Over a century of service to Canadian Industry and Consumers

Comfortable seat on the floor.

Montreal's new stock exchange tower at Place Victoria was designed with all the latest comforts and conveniences in mind. And that included the right heating system, which was where we came in. Our extensive experience in boiler and heat exchanger systems enabled us to build and install the one they needed. And we're happy to report it's helping to keep a whole tower full of people comfortable.

Another Canadian Vickers Installation.

That's the way it is with Canadian Vickers these days. Whatever you may need in industrial equipment, we're ready to help. And if the assignment is anything to do with heavy custom-engineering, you've come to the right people.

Just speak to the stock analyst here. He doesn't know who installed the building's boiler system nor what its technical details are. But he will tell you there's nothing quite like dealing with the hard, cold facts of business, in comfort!

Name it.
Experience says Canadian Vickers can do it.

Unglazed Vitrified "Plain End"
and Flex-Lox

CLAY SEWER PIPE

Diameters from 4" to 27"

National's pipe, up to 15", is shipped in bundles with the new Flex-Lox, failure-proof coupling already in place. Larger diameters require National's world-patented Plain End Coupling. A full range of fittings is available. The proven advantages of vitrified clay, with either coupling, result in a permanent, root-proof, infiltration-proof sewer line.

The complete range of Canadian Westinghouse product information

You can have it.

Or, we'll make up your own special catalogue.

The full listing of the thousands of products available at Canadian Westinghouse takes up a 5-foot shelf. And if you really need it, you can have it. But most buyers don't need all that data—so we'll design one catalogue to meet your needs.

Just send your name, position, company and address to:
Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited, P.O. Box 510,

Hamilton, Canada. Attention: Apparatus Advertising.

Ask for specific information or tell us that you want a salesman to call to determine your particular Westinghouse catalogue needs.

A Fair Offer

"If you will put a Jenkins Valve, recommended for your particular service, on the worst place you can find — where you cannot keep other valves tight — and if it is not perfectly tight or it does not hold steam, oil, acids, water or other fluids longer than any other valve, you may return it and your money will be refunded."

Jenkins Bros Limited

This offer was first published in 1869 and is republished from time to time as a reminder that quality and craftsmanship are an integral part of every Jenkins Valve you buy.

EXPORTING IS A CHALLENGE

Foreign trade is one of the pillars of Canadian prosperity, and offers a challenge to enterprising firms engaged in the production of commodities for which markets may be found in other countries. Canada is in fourth position among trading nations of the world, and the preservation of her stable economy depends to a large extent on the ability to export the products of her factories, fields, fisheries, forests and mines.

As more than one quarter of the Gross National Product consists of goods and services supplied to other lands, it is readily apparent that a large proportion of Canada's population is engaged directly or indirectly, in foreign trade. Over the past several decades there has been a gradual shift in the composition of our exports from raw to processed materials and in more recent years to manufactured products. As a result, goods classed as crude materials represented about 19%, fabricated products 36%, and end products 34%, of exports in 1970.

Export trade yields the best returns to firms that maintain continuity of supply. Experience has shown that those most likely to succeed are engaged in a well-established domestic trade, and have an assured production which permits them to create a favourable reputation and develop a demand for their products in other lands.

Experience is the prime requisite for any individual embarking on export trade, followed by capital. The latter may be dissipated rapidly without the former. Foreign tariff and import restrictions, transportation procedures, currency and finance problems, and packaging and documentation are a few of the shoals on which such a venture into uncharted waters may founder. Capital is necessary to tide over the intervals between the time services are rendered or shipments made and the time payments are received. It is also necessary to meet unexpected demands that may be experienced. However, with the wide variety of assistance and guidance readily available to businessmen, the problems are not as complex as is sometimes feared.

Prospective exporters might well consider the following fundamental questions before embarking on what can prove to be a rewarding voyage of discovery:

Does our business lend itself to export, or are the products we manufacture suited only to the domestic market?

Does the capacity of our plant meet the domestic and possible foreign demand for our product? What proportion of our output can be made available for shipment abroad on a continuing basis? What countries are now purchasing products similar to those being manufactured in our plant?

What is the volume of their purchases, and their sources of supply?

Are these items being imported because they are not being produced in the countries concerned, or because of a temporary shortage? If similar products are being made in the countries where a consumer demand exists, are local manufacturers protected by a tariff on imports, by import quotas, or by some other device?

Does some special feature of the Canadian product provide a marketing and merchandising advantage in other countries?

Are payment problems likely to be experienced due to a shortage of dollars? Are carrier services adequate with transportation costs sufficiently low to overcome possible domestic competition and competition from other countries? Are products of a bulk and value ratio which could best move via air freight? Negotiation of commodity rates for recurring shipments is possible.

Which markets have a growth potential?

What Canadian firms are presently exporting to the countries concerned, and are Canadian products highly regarded there?

Are there any Canadian export regulations that apply to the products it is proposed to export?

Export trade has national significance. It involves a live interest in the countries concerned, courtesy in the transaction of business with overseas customers, integrity, and a continuity of vigorous service, which contribute to the creation of a favourable reputation for the firm and its representatives. Goodwill engendered by one or more Canadian companies also leads to the development of friendly relations with Canada.

IMPORTANT POINTS FOR SUCCESSFUL EXPORTING

1. Make firm long-term export plans.
2. Manufacture and supply the right product for the market.
3. Institute a simple and logical system of costing for exports.
4. Offer reasonable credit terms.
5. Employ personnel who are experienced in export and travel and who know the languages.
6. Visit customers through regular trips overseas, and do not attempt to organize exports solely from the desk in the home office.
7. Support your product and your visits to customers abroad with attractive multi-lingual promotional literature and advertising.
8. Use the right approach in your overseas dealings; acquaint yourself with local conditions and customs; make your contacts in a friendly manner; diligently avoid the "hard sell" approach.
9. Never commit yourself to an arrangement you cannot fulfil. Nothing does more harm than to fail to live up to undertakings on prices, or on deliveries and servicing of export customers.
10. Exhibit at trade fairs abroad.

HOW TO EXPORT

Export is not merely an extension of domestic trade. Each market has its own peculiarities in taste, customs and business methods. A full understanding of the basics of export is therefore necessary, and an appreciation of the problems of your overseas customers needed.

On the following pages some of the principles and methods to be employed in the export trade are outlined. Export assistance is yours merely for the asking at every stage of the export business. Later in this section you will be acquainted, in detail, with the export services available from the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce. The material following is not meant to serve as a comprehensive manual of export practices. Its primary purpose is to indicate broadly some of the matters to which the exporter, or prospective exporter, should give serious consideration.

EXPORT DISTRIBUTION AND MARKETING

By Ivan E. Lenard, M.I.Ex.

Export business can be undertaken and organized in many ways. Usually, the penetration of foreign markets will start with shipments abroad from the Canadian plant. Later on, perhaps, the nature and volume of business might justify manufacturing abroad, either under license or by direct investment in factories located abroad.

The first step therefore is to obtain market information. It is essential to obtain accurate background information about the markets where business is contemplated. Market surveys can take many forms, depending on the information required. They vary from the most simple questionnaires covering such basic matters as: import restrictions; prevailing local prices; volume of current business, etc.; to highly specialized surveys to establish precise detailed information.

Basic data required in the initial stages leading to decisions as to whether business is possible, can be supplied through many channels, including the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the chartered banks, etc. To provide information for more sophisticated market surveys requires either personal visits to the market or the services of foreign trade consultants, international market survey organizations and in some cases a combination of all.

The results of the market survey should also determine the best methods to be employed for obtaining maximum distribution. Distribution methods will vary considerably, depending on the characteristics of the market, as well as the product involved. In some large European countries, or nations the size of India, it is usually desirable to deal with separate areas as individual market units within the total territory. These considerations might also arise in smaller countries, although in most cases it is possible to locate companies which can offer national distribution for most products.

There are several types of organization which should be considered before definite marketing plans are decided upon. Some of the better recognized export distribution organizations are: export agents or brokers located in Canada; commission agents; importer-wholesalers; distributors.

Export Agents or Brokers Located in Canada

Most of the major centres of Canada have a number of companies specialized in export distribution. These companies vary from large international trading organizations, specializing in a few products, to companies dealing with a wide variety of merchandise. In some cases these organizations purchase for their own account and pay cash on delivery in Canada for all transactions, while others develop business on a commission or fee basis.

Some of these companies specialize in certain markets only, while others have connections in most important export markets. Some have their own offices abroad but in most cases export companies in Canada employ local agents abroad. By representing a number of Canadian exporters they are in a position to spread travel and other expenses, thus enabling the Canadian manufacturer to benefit from lower overhead expenses, as well as specialized export knowledge. In most cases credit risks are either completely eliminated or reduced to the absolute minimum. Export agents can also cut down on transportation expenses by combining shipments and thus obtaining the most favourable freight rates.

There are also a number of export companies in Canada operating as combination export managers. Such companies act for the manufacturer as his own export department would do. Doing export work for a number of manufacturers, overhead expenses are shared and the manufacturer does not have to employ export staff of his own.

Commission Agents

Most countries offer a large number of organizations who represent foreign companies on a commission basis. These companies act as the manufacturer's own sales staff. In small countries these companies will handle a wide variety of products. In larger countries and more complex marketing territories, these companies become highly specialized in the types of goods they handle. In some European and Latin American countries, specialization reaches a high degree, whereby a commission agent in textiles, for example, will deal only in printed cotton goods.

Commission agencies vary considerably in size. They might be one-man operations, or they could employ over 100 salesmen of their own. In most cases, the established firms in the country have wide connections in the trade. They are very familiar with the basic requirements of the market. They sell direct to wholesalers, or in some cases direct to retailers, and expect to be reimbursed with a commission already included in the price offered to their customers. Rates of commission will fluctuate from a fraction of one percent to as much as 15% or 20%, depending on the product involved, the established customs in the trade and the functions the commission agent is expected to perform.

Depending on the arrangements concluded, the commission agent might be prepared to bear all costs of advertising, or leave such expenses to the manufacturer. In some cases the agent will be responsible for credit, while in other agreements all credit risks are to be the concern of the exporter. In the latter case, the exporter has the right to confirm or reject orders received from the commission agent.

Importers-Wholesalers

In many countries there are companies who purchase for their own account and offer distribution throughout the area in which they operate. In some small countries these organizations can offer national distribution but in larger countries, they will restrict their activities to a very specific marketing area. In general one can expect a reasonably high degree of specialization. These companies also employ a number of salesmen and sell direct to retail outlets. It is not uncommon for such companies to have a chain of retail outlets of their own, in addition to selling to other retailers in the trade.

Purchases will be made for the importer's own account and in such cases it is quite customary for the importer-wholesaler to undertake some advertising. Advertising and point of sale promotion expenses might be exclusively for the importer's account, or the exporter might allow for a promotion arrangement based on volume or some other consideration.

As a general rule, these companies expect to be appointed on an exclusive basis for a definite period of time. If most of the advertising is for the exporter's account, it might be possible to make non-exclusive arrangements. These companies can be expected to provide full service if the product involved requires some maintenance or periodic replacement of parts.

Distributors

The function of distributors differs greatly from country to country and from product to product. In general, distributors import direct only after the line has already been well introduced and offers reasonable turnover. In most cases distributors will not undertake direct advertising but will be active in the sales promotion field. This type of organization will engage in the highest degree of specialization and offers opportunities for the deepest market penetration. Exclusivity in clearly defined marketing areas might, in some cases, be requested, although it is not uncommon to be able to deal with most, if not all, distributors in the trade.

Except in most unusual cases, credit terms will be requested. These will vary in length of time, depending on general economic conditions prevalent in the country. Some distributors expect a fair proportion of their inventory to be financed by the exporter.

While the clearly defined marketing facilities outlined above are based on generalization, in many countries some of these functions tend to overlap. A combination of functions can be attained for some products in some markets. Each case should be closely examined and all factors carefully analyzed before binding commitments are agreed upon. In some countries the laws offer definite protection to local agents and make it extremely difficult to make changes in agency arrangements.

In general a commission agent or importer might be prepared to restrict his activities to the products of one manufacturer only in the field, particularly when the arrangement is of an exclusive nature. Distributors on the other hand will likely handle competitive products as well.

Often local manufacturers are prepared to act for the sale of allied products not manufactured by themselves. Such arrangements can lead to subsequent licensing agreements for manufacturing in the country involved. The advantages of dealing with an allied local manufacturer could be considerable and should lead to exchange of technical information, product development, etc.

Packing and Packaging

It is the responsibility of the exporter to see to it that goods shipped abroad arrive in good condition. Facilities for loading and unloading differ greatly in many ports of the world. In most cases today vessels can unload alongside, although there are still many important ports in the world where cargo must be lightered. Under any circumstances allowance must be made for adequate packing before the goods leave the manufacturer. To some extent the extra cost of heavy packing, where necessary, may be offset by the high local resale value of packing material. (See also comments under "Shipping and Marine Insurance.")

Air cargo is becoming a most important factor in foreign trade. Savings can be instituted, not only by elimination of heavy packing, but also by reducing local inventory costs through the shortening of the supply line.

Local tastes and preferences should be carefully considered in packaging. Wherever possible, printing should be in the language of the country of destination. Some countries impose a package tax when goods are landed and these considerations could be of utmost importance in meeting existing competition.

Sales Training

One of the most difficult problems facing the exporter is to provide adequate training to the people abroad who are expected to sell his product. The problem becomes multiplied when the product involved requires a degree of technical background and after-sales service. Difficulties in translating installation or service literature also tend to complicate the picture.

Some companies solve this problem by inviting key personnel of overseas representatives to spend some time in Canada and obtain the necessary technical background first hand. Such trained personnel are then expected to educate sales and service staff locally. The cost of such training is usually borne by the exporter. Other companies employ travelling company representatives who do the training abroad. Travelling service representatives, on the payroll of the manufacturer, can also fill a most useful function.

The importance of clearly worded technical literature in the local language cannot be overemphasized. In certain cases it is possible to have technical instructions permanently marked on the product in question and these should be, wherever possible, in the local language or dialect.

Training of Home Office Export Personnel

Export trade is becoming more and more the function of specialists. It is commonly believed that it is better to have an export specialist than a person very familiar with the product to be sold abroad. This is based on the theory that the export specialist will be able to obtain the necessary product knowledge more rapidly than would be the case in reverse.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association offers helpful facilities for the training of export personnel through the monthly meetings organized by its Export Study Clubs in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia. (See comments under Export Services of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.)

FINANCING EXPORTS

By Edward R. Ernst

The major portion of Canada's foreign trade is financed and facilitated by the chartered banks under arrangements with their foreign branches and correspondent banks abroad. This system provides Canadian importers and exporters with a smooth-working efficient banking service at reasonable cost. Besides making outright advances against bills of exchange supported by documents of title covering both incoming and outgoing shipments, banks in Canada offer their customers a comprehensive range of financial and information facilities. Such services have been developed throughout the years to meet demands created by the steady growth of Canada's foreign trade.

In addition to financing the Canadian trader, an important share of our export trade is financed for foreign banks on a sight or short-term basis. In these cases, the Canadian exporter receives payment upon presentation of specified documents to the Canadian bank concerned, the latter relying upon receipt of settlement in due course from its correspondent bank.

Foreign Departments

All the Canadian banks have well-established administrative foreign or international departments in their head offices to deal with the many problems presented by international trade and payments in a constantly changing world. This reservoir of up-to-date information on political and economic conditions in every country of consequence is readily available to customers anywhere in Canada through a network of branches. As well as furnishing a comprehensive range of information facilities, including advice on financing procedures, these departments enable branches to ease the day-to-day problems of Canadian traders in many respects. The functions and operations of these head office departments have been augmented from time to time to meet the changing needs of those engaged in foreign trade in all parts of Canada. Our Bank, for instance, has sent representatives periodically to practically every part of the world since the last war to gather information at first hand to improve our services to the public.

Credit Risks

In export trade, as in the domestic market, the seller must assess the credit risk and quote terms of sale accordingly. In foreign trade, however, the normal risk must be considered in conjunction with the financial standing of the country of destination. The buyer may be perfectly willing and able to pay in his own currency, but, if his country suffers from a chronic shortage of foreign exchange, and particularly of dollars, the Canadian supplier may be faced with lengthy delay in obtaining settlement. He may even suffer outright loss.

Where buyers and sellers have an inter-company relationship or are otherwise well and favourably known to each other, and where there are no serious exchange transfer difficulties, exports are often arranged on an open account or consignment basis. Such sales are generally settled by mail or cable transfers through banking media and present no particular financing problems. These transactions are known as clean payments, and a large volume of these payments is handled daily by Canadian banks on instructions from correspondent banks around the world. Cash with the order is another relatively simple and effective method of settlement. This procedure is, however, seldom used in these highly competitive days.

The Documentary Draft

A large and growing proportion of Canadian export trade is financed by means of sight or time drafts drawn by shippers on buyers abroad. Such drafts are known as bills of exchange. They are usually accompanied by documents of title consisting of commercial and customs invoices, marine insurance policy or certificate, and a full set of ocean bills of lading, made out to the order of shipper and endorsed in blank — or, in other words, in negotiable form. In the case of sight drafts, these documents are normally released to importers only against payment, but when thirty-day or longer-time drafts are used, surrender of documents usually takes place solely on the strength of the importer's written acceptance on the face of the bill. In every instance the exporter must supply his bank with complete collection and settlement instructions.

The export may be financed by discount of the relative bill of exchange at the exporter's bank at time of shipment. Alternatively, the bill could be handed to the bank with instructions to collect before making settlement. Still another financing procedure is for the Canadian exporter to pledge the bill to his bank as partial or full security for a general line of credit.

Principle of Documentary Drawings

The basic principle behind documentary drawings is the fact that the seller is satisfied to start the goods on their journey before they are paid for, but he wants to be assured of payment before they actually pass into the physical possession of his customer. If the bill is drawn payable at so many days after sight or date, the buyer's written acceptance definitely establishes his obligation (but not necessarily his ability) to pay at a fixed maturity date. Apart from the exchange conversion feature, which is a serious factor in some countries, the main risk in use of document draft procedure is that the buyer may refuse or be financially unable to honour the drawing. Where the draft has been drawn at sight, dishonour usually results in expensive warehousing and other costs for the seller, pending disposal of the goods to another buyer, possibly at a substantial loss. The drawer's position in regard to non-payment at maturity of an accepted time draft is even more insecure, because the goods have already passed into the hands of the buyer and probably have been disposed of to third parties. Costly legal proceedings, followed by partial if not complete loss, are often the result.

It is, therefore, evident that Canadian exporters should be fully satisfied not only with the reliability of buyers but also that foreign exchange resources and general economic conditions in the country of import will permit prompt settlement. Reports on the credit-worthiness and general reputation of foreign firms may be obtained by airmail or cable through your own bank anywhere in Canada. Similarly, the branch of the bank you deal with has ready access to the latest foreign economic and other practical information available at the international department of its head office.

The Bank Act

The financing of Canada's exports not only covers the period between shipment of goods and final settlement from abroad but also begins at the first stages of domestic production. Under the provisions of Sections 86 to 90 of the Canadian Bank Act, the chartered banks are enabled to provide a large volume of short-term working capital to industry and commerce. The purpose is to facilitate the complete series of operations, from processing of raw material to finished product and to eventual disposal of surplus production in markets abroad. In fact, these sections of the Bank Act, which had their origin in "an Act granting additional facilities in commercial transactions" passed by the Parliament of the old Province of Canada in 1859, constitute the very backbone of our industrial production financing and, in turn, have an important bearing on the flow of our export trade.

Commercial Letters of Credit

The history of commercial letters of credit dates back to the earliest days of banking. Their origin is credited to Roman and Lombard money-changers who also are believed to have introduced the bill of exchange. While there are various definitions of letters of credit, the following one, I think, most aptly describes the purpose of the instrument: "A bank issuing a letter of credit furnishes its credit, which is both good and well known, instead of the buyer's credit, which may be good but is not so well known". The wording of definitions may differ but the basic fact remains that the establishing bank gives its own undertaking to pay to sellers stated sums of money against delivery of certain documents within a prescribed time.

Commercial or documentary letters of credit may be issued in various forms but, generally speaking, they fall into two main categories:—

IRREVOCABLE CREDITS, which constitute a binding and irrevocable obligation on the part of the establishing bank to honour drawings issued in conformity with terms of the credit. Such credits may not be cancelled or altered without the consent of all parties concerned. The Canadian bank through which the credit has been forwarded will add the following clause on the relative advice to the beneficiary:—

"This letter is solely an advice of credit opened by the above mentioned correspondent and conveys no engagement by us."

It is the practice, however, of many Canadian exporters to require the written assurance or firm undertaking of a bank in Canada that credits issued by a foreign bank will be honoured in due course. For instance, the issuing bank abroad may not be well known to the Canadian beneficiary or perhaps the importing country has a difficult exchange position which conceivably could interfere with performance of the issuing bank's undertaking. Provided, of course, it is instructed to do so by its foreign correspondent, the Canadian advising bank then assumes complete responsibility for the credit by adding the following undertaking to its letter of advice to the beneficiary:—

"We hereby confirm this credit and thereby undertake that any drafts drawn and accompanied by documents in order will be duly honoured upon presentation."

REVOCABLE CREDITS, otherwise known as "Authority to Pay" or "Authority to Purchase". These instruments authorize payment to the beneficiary upon presentation of draft and specified documents — subject, however, to modification or cancellation without notice to the beneficiary. Such credits serve mainly as a means of arranging payment and afford the exporter very little protection. They are used infrequently and only where sellers have implicit confidence in the buyer's ability and willingness to carry out terms of sales contracts. The wording of these credits and any relative letters of advice should include this clause:—

"This credit is subject to revocation or modification at any time without notice to you."

Uses of Letters of Credit

The importance of commercial letters of credit and their usefulness generally in world trade warrants more detailed mention of their functions and use. First, it should be clearly understood that they deal with documents but not goods. Neither the negotiating bank in Canada nor the issuing bank abroad can accept any responsibility whatsoever for the quality or other characteristics of the underlying goods, but they must ensure only that the documents are made out strictly in accordance with the terms of the credit. It follows that the importer should satisfy himself thoroughly through his bank of the general standing and reputation of the exporter before placing the order. Second, even an irrevocable credit offers limited, if any, protection to the exporter, who is unable to meet the terms of the credit in every respect. If discrepancies occur in documents which cannot be corrected in time for delivery and the exporter furnishes the negotiating bank with a guarantee he has, in effect, automatically signed away his rights under the credit. In other words, the foreign importer if he chose could refuse to take delivery of the documents because they did not agree with his requirements as outlined in the credit. It is easy to imagine what might happen if there had been a sharp drop in the price of the goods following placement of the order.

Canada now subscribes to a code of procedure governing commercial letters of credit transactions known as the "Uniform Customs and Practice for Commercial Documentary Credits." The United States and many other countries have operated under this code for years, with Canada and most other countries in the Commonwealth adopting the code recently. Also, the National Foreign Trade Council Inc., New York, have issued a useful pamphlet containing definitions of trade terms and abbreviations.

The Foreign Exchange Risk

If the exporter sells for Canadian dollars, the exchange risk falls on the foreign importer, but if payment is to be made in the currency of the importer's country, the prudent exporter will protect himself against exchange rate fluctuations between the time of sale and of settlement. This he can do by selling a future to his bank for delivery at the approximate time the foreign funds are due for payment. An uncovered exchange position could easily cost an exporter not only his trading profit on the goods but a substantial loss besides.

EXPORT PRICING

By Richard B. Spiro

The subject of export pricing embraces the principles of price calculation and the method of quotation. The former is of prime importance in establishing prices which will be competitive in the foreign market, while still allowing an adequate return to the exporter in terms of contributing to the profit of his overall operation. The latter is concerned with the necessity for quoting in such a way that the overseas customer can readily calculate his landed cost and compare it with competitive offerings; in short, it makes it easy for him to buy.

Calculation of Export Prices

While export prices will necessarily bear a fairly close relationship to domestic prices, and will perhaps need adjustment in the light of prices of competitive merchandise, the theoretically correct method is to calculate prices based on the actual cost of producing, selling and shipping the goods, providing, in addition, for the coverage of general overhead expenses and an adequate net profit.

These costs may be divided into three general classifications:

- (1) Direct materials and labour (at standard or normal costs applicable to the product being offered, less drawback of duties paid on imported components or raw materials).
- (2) Factory overhead (which should be calculated and apportioned on the basis of the average of the plant capacity occupied in the production of goods for export).
- (3) Sales and general overhead.

In every business there are many items of cost which are not especially attributable to any particular phase of the operation, but which must be covered if the business is to operate at all. In tabulating costs for export purposes, every effort should be made to eliminate those costs which do not bear any direct relation to the export operation. The examination can be made particularly searching in those businesses where export sales form only a small proportion of total sales.

The expenses of the export operation itself will include such items as: Export department salaries, travelling expenses, catalogues and promotional literature, export advertising, commissions to travellers and to representatives abroad, transportation to the agreed point of delivery (see below), packing and shipping materials and labour, legal expenses, patents and trademark fees, office supplies, postage and cables, taxes, rent, insurance, interest and exchange, provision for bad debts, etc. The tabulation of the expenses and the preparation of a budgetary Profit and Loss Statement will permit the export executive to arrive at quotations based on factory cost by indicating the percentage mark-up which must be added to factory cost to cover the expenses of the export operations and to produce the desired margin of net profit.

Fixed and Variable Costs

In the analysis of costs and expenses it will be found that certain items will be characterized as fixed charges and are independent of production or sales volume. Others vary directly and automatically with the volume of goods produced and sold, while a third variety may be described as controllable and bears a more or less direct relation to the volume of business. Examples of "fixed" charges are civic taxes, administration, rent, etc. Charges which vary in direct ratio to volume include direct labour and materials, commissions, etc. In the third category are such items as export advertising, travelling expenses, clerical costs, etc.

In a market where very keen competition is being faced, a careful examination of the relationships between these cost categories may be the means of determining whether a price can be quoted which will be competitive, or in other words, whether an export order can be obtained at all. In many organizations, export business represents only a comparatively small percentage of the total turnover and, in such cases, it may be argued that, where necessary, an export price which covers the variable and controllable export costs but disregards all or a portion of the fixed charges will still be profitable from the point of view of the overall operation. In such an organization, it may be assumed that the fixed expenses will be the same whether or not this export business is added to the domestic business. The export order, so obtained, is therefore a means of employing plant capacity, which may not otherwise be profitably engaged, and to absorb a portion, though not by domestic standards its full share, of the fixed expenses of the business.

If, however, export business represents more than, say 15% to 20% of the total turnover, it may be clearly impossible to charge the whole of the fixed expenses of the organization against that part of the production which is sold in the domestic market, as this may price these products out of the domestic market.

Price Quotations and Foreign Trade Terms

A significant factor in the quotation of prices is the cost of transporting the goods to the point of delivery indicated in the sales contract. This point is designated by certain internationally accepted "foreign trade terms."

The foreign trade terms indicate the geographic point in the line of connection between seller and buyer up to which the seller pays all transportation and insurance costs (or in other words, includes transportation and insurance costs in his quotation) and from which point onwards the buyer pays all transportation or insurance costs (or in other words, from which point onwards the seller adds transportation and insurance costs to his quotation in case he, acting on behalf of the buyer, prepays these expenses). The foreign trade terms further define in the line of connection between seller and buyer the point of delivery, which means the point up to which the seller holds title to the goods and is therefore responsible for them as far as damages, losses, etc., are concerned and where the title then passes from the seller to the buyer, who from this point onwards is responsible for any losses or damages.

As one proceeds along this line of connection from the seller to the buyer, it will progressively become easier for the buyer to calculate his landed costs. If one quotes, for instance, "F.O.B. Factory", which is often called "ex works", then the buyer, in order to arrive at his landed costs, would not only have to figure out his import Customs Duty, the landing charges in his own port of arrival, the ocean freight and marine insurance, but he would also have to know the inland transport in the country of supply such as for instance, the cost of transporting the merchandise from Winnipeg to Montreal; it is quite clear that it would be difficult for the importer in a far-away country to obtain information on the cost of inland rail transport in Canada, which, in the case of an "F.O.B. Factory" or "ex works" quotation would be necessary to permit him to figure out his landed costs. If we quote "F.A.S. Vessel" (Free Along Side) or "F.O.B. Vessel" (Free on Board Vessel) at a named Port of Sailing, then, in order to arrive at his landed costs, he would only have to know the ocean freight rate, marine insurance rate and the actual landing costs and Customs Duties which occur in his own country.

With competition becoming keener all the time and with exporters in other countries used to making it easy for their overseas customers to figure out their landed costs, it has become necessary to proceed in one's quotations along this line of connection between seller and buyer to points closer to the buyer, and to quote prices for delivery at the port of destination such as for instance: C & F (Cost and Freight, which would only leave to the buyer to figure out and pay the marine insurance premium); or: C.I.F. (which means Cost, Insurance excluding war risk insurance, and Freight); or C.I.F. & C. (which with the last letter "C" includes also the commission which the buyer may possibly pay to a buying house or broker whom he may employ in the country of supply); or, the quotation may even be: C.I.F.C. & I. (which with the last letter "I" indicates that also bank interest, in the case of extended credit terms, is included in the quotation and will not have to be added to the quoted price by the buyer).

Foreign Trade Terms—Definitions

In an effort to define in a uniform manner certain well known terms generally used in making price quotations, there has been developed in various countries a set of rules or definitions which have been adopted by certain trade organizations and others setting out in some detail the obligations of seller and buyer attaching to the particular terms. In the United States the National Foreign Trade Council Incorporated, the National Council of American Importers Incorporated, and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America on July 30, 1941, through a joint committee, approved of what are known as "Revised American Foreign Trade Definitions — 1941." These follow in general, although not in detail, the International Rules for the Interpretation of Trade Terms — generally known as "Incoterms, 1953," defined by the International Chamber of Commerce. It should be understood that the use of such rules is optional and that the approval of the particular rules referred to by designated trade bodies does not lend to them the force of law. Nevertheless, where a price quotation in accordance with these definitions and a contract of sale is concluded with a statement that the price is subject to these definitions, it would have considerable force in determining what is understood by the parties to the contract in respect to such price quotation.

While specific reference has been made to the "Revised American Foreign Trade Definitions—1941" and to "Incoterms 1953," it is essential to bear in mind, as previously pointed out, that foreign trade definitions have been issued by organizations in various parts of the world and the courts of different countries have interpreted these definitions in different ways. To reduce the opportunities for misunderstanding to a minimum, therefore, it is fundamental that there be agreement between seller and buyer as to what is actually meant when a price quotation is made. A buyer in a foreign country who is familiar with definitions endorsed by an organization in the foreign country and the court decisions interpreting such definitions, on receiving a price quotation from a seller in Canada is constrained to construe it in the light of such definition unless the quotation is clarified by a stipulation as to what definitions apply in making the price quotation.

In addition to the commonly used terms, there are many others, some of which are found in particular trades only. Where definitions are not formally approved and adopted by trade organizations for general use, it is necessary that a seller and buyer should specify exactly what is understood in respect thereto, indicating the obligations of both parties so that there may be no misunderstanding. In respect to "C.I.F." contracts, it further should be pointed out that the International Law Association adopted certain rules relating thereto in 1928 which, as later modified in 1931, are known as the "Warsaw-Oxford Rules."

An extensive list of technical abbreviations used in foreign trade and exchange transactions is given in Appendix II.

SHIPPING AND MARINE INSURANCE

In the conduct of export trade it is essential that meticulous care be exercised in understanding and complying with the requirements of the buyer and the importing country, as well as Canadian Government regulations where they apply. Mistakes and misunderstandings can be costly, and, because of the distances involved, can give rise to lengthy delays. This is more fully developed in the comments appearing under the caption "Documentation".

It is imperative that careful attention be given to the packing of the goods. Containerization, whereby the goods are enclosed in a transferable box, usually owned by the carrier and which when emptied is used further in transportation, has become increasingly popular on the busy ocean trade routes. Usually, containerization reduces the amount of protective packing required for individual packages or pieces, but it is dangerous to generalize because the nature of articles varies. Each type of shipment scheduled for container carriage should be assessed individually. When shipments are to be carried in conventional ocean carriage the packing must be strong enough to withstand the stresses of numerous handlings and stowage in the ship's hold so as to protect the contents against physical, chemical and moisture damage, as well as against pilferage. At the same time the packing should be designed to avoid unnecessary increased cost, including freight cost. The marking of the packages or pieces should be bold and durable and properly identify the shipment.

Care should also be exercised in the selection of the transportation routing, and in properly describing the goods in the bill of lading to assure that the most favourable ocean rate may be applied.

Frequent year-round sailings are available from Canadian Eastern and Western Seaboard ports to most foreign countries. In recent years the St. Lawrence River ports have been operative throughout the year with the aid of ice-breaking services and ice-strengthened vessels. During the summer navigation season, roughly from mid-April to late November, the Great Lakes ports have direct sailings.

Ocean carriers enjoy immunity from liability for loss or damage caused by perils of the seas and a wide range of risks under the statutes of many maritime countries and the conditions of carriage embodied in the ocean bill of lading. Marine insurance, which is designed to afford protection to those having an interest in the goods, against perils from which the ocean carrier is relieved from liability is, therefore, an indispensable adjunct of ocean commerce. Cargo coverage is a specialized field which can not be described here except in a very cursory manner. There are three main types of cargo coverage available—F.P.A. (Free of Particular Average); W.P.A. (With Particular Average); and "All Risks" (i.e. all physical loss or damage from external causes), together with many variations of these three main forms of coverage which are employed in insuring particular cargoes. It is important for the foreign trader to realize that a marine insurance policy is a valued policy and that the value declared should be of such amount that in the event of a casualty, the assured will be fully reimbursed for the losses sustained. War risks and the inclusion of coverage against losses resulting from strikes, riots and civil commotion are not embraced in a marine policy but may be added thereto by endorsement or issuance of a separate policy. If it is desired to have insurance attach from time the shipment leaves the exporter's factory to the time of its arrival at the premises of the consignee, this may be arranged by the addition of "Marine Extension Clauses" to the policy so as to afford protection from "warehouse to warehouse".

Export shipments may be insured under a specific policy issued for a particular shipment, or an exporter may arrange for a floating policy to cover all his shipments properly declared through a copy of the individual insurance certificate sent to the Insurance Company. Various other clauses are available to meet the particular requirements of the assured, and it is consequently necessary that the underwriter have full knowledge of the insurance buyer's marketing practices and trading methods in order that a marine policy may be "tailor made" to afford satisfactory protection. This usually can be arranged whether the insurance buyer's interest is of a direct or contingent nature. The exporter should accordingly consult a reliable marine insurance broker in order to obtain a policy which best suits his particular needs and the requirements of his customer abroad.

In recent years there has been a considerable expansion in international air freight services which has been stimulated by technological advancement particularly apparent in such areas as carrying capacity, speed, handling and terminal services. This mode of carriage has succeeded in attracting progressively larger volumes of cargo in the development of overseas markets for products which, if dependent upon older surface means of transport, would probably never have materialized. This type of expedited transportation is especially appealing to exporters of valuable or seasonal merchandise, perishable products, repair parts and traffic of an emergency nature requiring fast despatch, but its attractions apply to an ever increasing range of other products. While air freight charges are normally much higher than those charged by surface carriers for the preponderance of overseas traffic, the freight in many cases is only one factor to be considered in determining the over-all distribution costs. Frequently there are offsetting advantages in the use of this mode of carriage, such as less expensive packing, reduced inventory charges, lower insurance costs and other less tangible benefits which may make it profitable to use air cargo service.

The liability of the air carriers is limited in amount and to the negligence of itself, its servants, agents and employees, acting within the scope of their authority. All risk insurance may be arranged through the carrier or an insurance company.

DOCUMENTATION

In preparing the documentation for export shipments there are two principal considerations to be borne in mind, accuracy and time. In all aspects of export trade it is essential that care be taken in meticulously meeting the customs requirements of the buyer and the regulations of the importing country. Errors and irregularities may result in heavy fines or the assessment of excessive rates of duty in the importing country. In addition to the requirements of the country of destination the exporter should take care to ensure that the documents provided are in accordance with the terms of the letter of credit, where payment is being made by this means. In some instances documents that are not required by the customs authority of the importing country are specified in the letter of credit and if they are not correctly provided it may be difficult or impossible for the exporter to receive payment. The second consideration is that ample time should be allowed for the preparation of documents prior to the required date of shipment. Often printed forms have to be secured from consulates, completed and submitted to the consulate for visé and considerable delays can result should the consul not be available when the documents are submitted or if, for example, they are presented on a national holiday of the consul's country.

There are several documents required for most overseas shipments, each of which is a study in itself:

(a) Ocean Bill of Lading — which may be a Straight Bill authorizing delivery of the goods to the named consignee, or an Order Bill which requires presentation of a negotiable original in order to claim the shipment (may require legalization by the Consul of the country to which the goods are consigned);

In Air Cargo the Air Waybill is the instrument equivalent to the bill of lading.

(b) The Commercial Invoice (may require legalization by the Consul of the importing country, and may also require certification as to origin and value of the goods by a competent authority such as the Canadian Manufacturers' Association);

(c) The Insurance Policy or Certificate;

(d) A draft or Bill of Exchange whose tenor reflects the terms of payment agreed between exporter and buyer;

(e) Customs Invoice or Certificate of Origin (Commonwealth countries);

(f) Consular Invoice and/or Certificate of Origin (for non-Commonwealth countries) which may be subject to legalization by the Consul of the country concerned (many non-Commonwealth countries require, in addition, an endorsement or certificate as to origin and value of the goods, signed by a competent authority such as the Canadian Manufacturers' Association);

(g) Packing list;

(h) Import License and/or Exchange Permit must, in the case of certain countries, be obtained from the importer and presented when applying for consular visa of customs documents. In the case of some countries it is sufficient if the number of the import license is indicated on all documents.

(i) As far as Canadian Government regulations are concerned, Export Entry Form B-13 is to be furnished for all commercial shipments over $50. in value and an Export Permit may be required depending upon the nature of the goods and the country of ultimate destination.

Where imported materials or parts are used in, wrought into, attached to, or consumed in the manufacture of articles in Canada, and such articles are subsequently exported, the Canadian Government allows a drawback of 99% of all duties and taxes paid on such imported materials or parts. The claim form is known as K-32 and, if the importer of the materials or parts is not the manufacturer claiming the drawback, it will be necessary for the latter to secure from the Canadian importer a certificate of importation and sale. There are certain documents that have to be presented with the claim for drawback, such as the export invoice and the export entry form. An extra copy of the latter (Form B-13) should be completed and handed to the transportation company or parcel post authorities along with the other copies, with a note thereon requesting that the Collector of Customs (at the last port from which the goods leave Canada) stamp, sign and return it to the exporter for export drawback purposes.

In all these matters, the exporter who is unfamiliar with the procedure or with the requirements of the market to which he is shipping should consult the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and other expert advisers, and he may find it advisable to engage the services of a competent international freight forwarder. The Export Department of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association can supply members with summaries of the customs documentation requirements of any country, and time should be allowed to study these requirements well in advance of making a shipment.

FOREIGN LICENSING AGREEMENTS

For a variety of reasons arising from the growing industrialization of overseas markets and the increasing pressure of competition from third countries, a situation may be faced where the continuing export of finished goods becomes unprofitable. In these circumstances, the manufacturer may consider the desirability of starting a manufacturing operation abroad, perhaps through a foreign license agreement. Such an arrangement may produce a number of worthwhile results, such as a tactical advantage in the market concerned and in adjoining markets, the monetary return from the export of "know how", the mutual exchange of technical information with the licensee, and the possibility of a continued or increasing volume of exports of components. The operation of a foreign licensing programme involves a much lower capital commitment than direct investment in manufacturing facilities abroad, but there is correspondingly less control over the operation. Any such undertaking requires a most careful investigation and study, and the difficulties should not be under-estimated. Additional information on this subject may be obtained from the Export Department of The Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

SOURCES OF REFERENCE

An exporter will find the accumulation of a small basic reference library an invaluable aid in the operation of an export department. In addition, a loose-leaf system of references arranged alphabetically by countries will enable the export manager to keep current information on hand relating to the markets of specific interest to the company, with particular reference to its own products. Under each country the documentation requirements should be set out according to the various general divisions, namely: ocean freight, parcel post, rail, air parcel post, air cargo and express. Under these in turn should be listed the names of the customs documents and the data required for each. If possible, typical forms should be included in the loose-leaf book and, by way of example, information should be typed in under the various columns. Space should be reserved for amendments and from time to time as required the information should be reconsolidated. The date the information is compiled should be noted as well as the date of any amendments and their source. In this way the exporter will have a date to check from for documents in future shipments.

A list of basic reference works is given in the BIBLIOGRAPHY OF EXPORT REFERENCES which appears as Appendix III.

EXPORT SERVICES OF THE CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION

Throughout its 100 years of existence the Association has regarded the development of Canadian export trade as one of its prime objectives. Through the combined activities of its specialized head office service departments and division and branch offices across the country the Association is able to provide a complete export service to members on the promotion, techniques and procedures of exporting.

The services provided by head office departments are summarized as follows:

EXPORT DEPARTMENT

Co-ordination of the CMA Export Forum organization and other export education programs including courses; a multi-lingual translation service; authentication of Customs documents for export shipments; circulars and the fortnightly "World Trade News"; trade statistics; information on all export procedures, techniques and markets; export credits insurance and financing; trade fairs and exhibitions; trade missions; foreign aid programs; export agreements; technical abbreviations; bilateral and international trade agreements and conferences including the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade; foreign customs tariffs, documentation, preferential duties, extra import charges, valuation for duty purposes and dumping duties; country of origin, labelling and other marking requirements; import and exchange restrictions and quotas of all countries; passports, visas laws affecting business travellers; customs drawbacks and refunds on export; and export permit regulations.

LEGISLATION DEPARTMENT

The Association's Legislation Department provides information on new developments in commercial law, Canadian and foreign taxation, trade marks, industrial designs, patents and copyrights.

TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT

Included in the kinds of export information obtainable through the CMA's Transportation Department are: freight rates and services of the air, land and ocean carriers; rules and conditions of carriage; port charges; packaging; containerization; marine insurance; and the obligations of buyer and seller with respect to transportation and insurance under the various terms of sale generally used in international trade.

EXPORT EDUCATION

In addition to supporting, both directly and indirectly, a variety of export educational programs across the country, the Association provides a comprehensive program of export education on a continuous, nationwide basis. In order to initiate members into the techniques and procedures of foreign trade, courses are sponsored in co-operation with the Federal and Provincial Governments. To the basic course in export has been added a senior international marketing course and, more recently, a course in export documentation.

These courses are complemented by continuing programs of export education presented by the Association through its Export Forum organization. Seven Forums, operating in, respectively, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia, provide the means through which exporters, both new and established, can exchange experiences, discuss problems and learn about the techniques and procedures of exporting. In general, the Forums' programs are oriented to the techniques and procedures of selling and shipping abroad. Each group, however, plans its activities to meet the special circumstances and needs of its members.

By extending the use of courses as a means of giving export newcomers the grounding they need in the mechanics of exporting, the Forums have had greater freedom to devote their activities to the more advanced techniques of marketing.

In Ontario, some highlights of the 1970-71 season were: a tour of the air cargo facilities at Malton Airport and a champagne flight by courtesy of Air Canada; a day in Buffalo, New York, to visit the new Canadian Government Trade Office and for meetings with businessmen and US Customs Officials; a study of the Cultures and Customs of Japan; a meeting to study economic factors which brought about a "Floating Dollar". Perhaps, the outstanding occasion was the two-day Conference on International Marketing held in Ottawa, when Forum members from across the country gathered to review many of the problems and principal marketing areas of the world.

The three Forums in the Atlantic Provinces have been particularly active. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have both been enjoying their sixth year of activity, with many programs on export requirements. Working closely with the provincial governments they have brought to the business community opportunity to join in locally sponsored seminars.

The CMA Export Forum of British Columbia, now in its 10th year, and the CMA Export Forum of Quebec, about to celebrate its 25th anniversary, provide monthly meetings for their members on a wide variety of topics. In British Columbia, emphasis has been placed on discussion techniques, subjects examined including documentation, tariffs, banking, insurance, packaging, containerization, materials handling and warehousing.

Each Forum in its own way attempts to develop export consciousness and to provide a forum for discussion of the problems facing export-minded manufacturers. Membership of more than 1,600 across Canada is proof of the need for, and the satisfying of that need by, the unique CMA Export Forum organization.

PUBLICATIONS

The Association from time to time publishes detailed booklets on various aspects of export trade techniques. These studies, together with other reference publications for exporters, are listed in the chapter headed "Bibliography of Export References".

Industrial Canada

The Association's official monthly magazine "Industrial Canada" is, like the CMA itself, directed towards the promotion of Canadian manufacturing industries and the specific interests of exporters. Its regular service features include timely information on foreign economic developments which affect the trade climate. In addition to the "International Trade and Industry" and "Transportation Digest" features, special articles on export subjects are periodically included in "Industrial Canada's" editorial programme which is consistently planned to provide readers with expert information on the latest in proven management techniques.

Canadian Trade Index

For over 70 years "Canadian Trade Index", the Association's annual directory, has provided buyers and sellers throughout the world with detailed information to facilitate their contacts with Canadian manufacturers. With a finely-classified products section and details as to the size, type of business, brand names, foreign representation, operating executives, parent-subsidiary relationships and geographical distribution of about 13,000 manufacturers across Canada, "Canadian Trade Index" is an active and effective instrument of trade promotion. Copies are distributed to thousands of importers in over sixty countries through the co-operation of the Canadian Government Trade Commissioner Service.

Circular Service

Important matters of immediate interest to exporters and detailed technical trade data are conveyed to members with all possible speed by CMA circulars, issued at the national, divisional and branch level.

In particular, a fortnightly circular "World Trade News" gives details of changes and developments in tariffs and trade regulations including Customs documentation; export, joint venture and licensing opportunities; trade fairs and exhibitions; trade missions; services abroad for Canadian manufacturers; trade commissioners on tour; government appointments; foreign investments; publications including trade journals abroad to feature Canada.

EXPORT TRADE POLICY

The development of Canadian trade policies and government services has always been a vital part of the Association's export service to members. Export policies are generated from the membership level through a number of specialized committees and sub-committees whose focal point is the Association's Export Committee. Timely recommendations, based on the considered views of exporting manufacturers, are presented to government on a variety of matters including: international and bilateral trade negotiations; trade representation abroad; fairs, exhibitions and missions; export credits insurance and financing; protection of foreign property; foreign aid programs: non-tariff barriers; taxation; export education; standards.

The Association stands for and advocates the greatest possible trade between nations and believes that steadfast support should be given to existing international organizations and institutions in their efforts to solve the problems of world trade and finance. It recognizes that the well-being of the Canadian people depends to a great extent on the volume of Canada's export trade, which provides the means of purchasing necessary imports.

The Association believes that the extent of Canada's export trade depends to a great degree upon the ingenuity and hard work of many thousands of Canadian firms and individuals engaged in the export of foodstuffs, raw materials, manufactured goods and services. Exporters must have all possible knowledge of the trade practices and requirements covering export shipments and it is for this reason that the Association has paid so much attention to its specialized departmental services which have continuously expanded to keep abreast of the times.

In the increasingly complex modern world, however, government policy plays a growing part. Canadian Governments have always displayed a keen interest in the problems of exporters, and, wherever and whenever necessary, the Association has placed the views and recommendations of exporters before the Government concerning trade policy and its administration. Canadian manufacturers and exporters are particularly fortunate in being served by a Trade Commissioner Service which is second to none in the world, and the Association has had particularly cordial relationships with these officers who, on their Canadian tours, have made CMA offices their headquarters for over half a century.

The Association maintains close liaison with federal and provincial government departments concerned with Canada's external trade. It also co-operates with manufacturers' and businessmen's organizations in other countries in the interests of facilitating international commerce and takes an active part in the work of such international bodies as the International Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Business and Industry Advisory Committee for O.E.C.D., the Pacific Basin Economic Co-operation Committee.

GOVERNMENT EXPORT SERVICES

Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce

Canada's approach to trade is to adhere to the philosophy of multilateralism which is embodied in the principles and structures of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade - GATT.

Although vitally interested in bilateral relations with individual countries, it does not want, contrary to a presently developing trend, to put its trade on a bilateral barter type basis or a basis of arrangements between trading blocs.

Why? As the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, The Honourable Jean-Luc Pepin, has said "The reasons are well known but, like all fundamentals, bear repeating." They are:

Efficiency in the use of world resources: The freest movement of goods and services permits the most rational and economic allocation of resources on a world wide basis.

Interest of exporters: The superabundance of certain goods for which Canada must find markets makes us particularly sympathetic, and vulnerable, to the needs of other exporters. We must have as open a market as possible in order to encourage our trading partners to behave in a similar manner and accept our exports on a straight competitive basis.

Canadian competitiveness: As our population is small and, consequently, our markets limited, optimum access to large, external markets is necessary to take advantage of specialization and economies of scale.

Consumer interest: A freer international trading environment provides Canadian consumers with better quality and wider variety of goods and services. Other reasons for supporting multilateralism are geographical and political. Different areas of Canada are particularly oriented toward different parts of the world, and in the system of open markets, each can develop better and political unity is preserved.

Regardless of how large external markets may be, however, international competition is intense and there are few, if any, Canadian companies that cannot use support from the federal Government.

The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce can assist industry through the complete cycle - from research and development, through production to marketing the finished product. The Export Development Corporation, Canadian International Development Agency and Dominion Bureau of Statistics are other federal organizations which also assist but I, T & C is the key department.

I, T & C is organized to help product development and manufacturing at home and the exporting of goods and services abroad. Departmental units geared to export are: the General Relations and Area Relations Offices; Industry, Trade and Traffic Services; Fairs and Missions; International Defence Programs and the Trade Commissioner Service. The Publicity Branch and Office of Industrial Policy Adviser each have international and domestic responsibilities. And the Department's nine commodity sector branches, although concerned with promoting establishment, growth and efficiency in Canadian industry, are also active in trade development.

Office of General Relations

Office of General Relations includes a General Trade Policy, a Commodity Trade Policy and an International Financing Branch. The Office is responsible for advance planning of Canada's external trade policies and general trade policy matters involving agriculture and both primary and secondary manufacturing. It is also responsible for the planning, negotiation and administration of inter-governmental commodity agreements where close contact is maintained with representatives of Canadian producers, importers and industry associations.

The Office participates in the development of policies and procedures in external aid, export credits and other export financing arrangements. It keeps Canadian exporters informed about the range of financing facilities provided by the Canadian Government and those available through international organizations.

Office of Area Relations

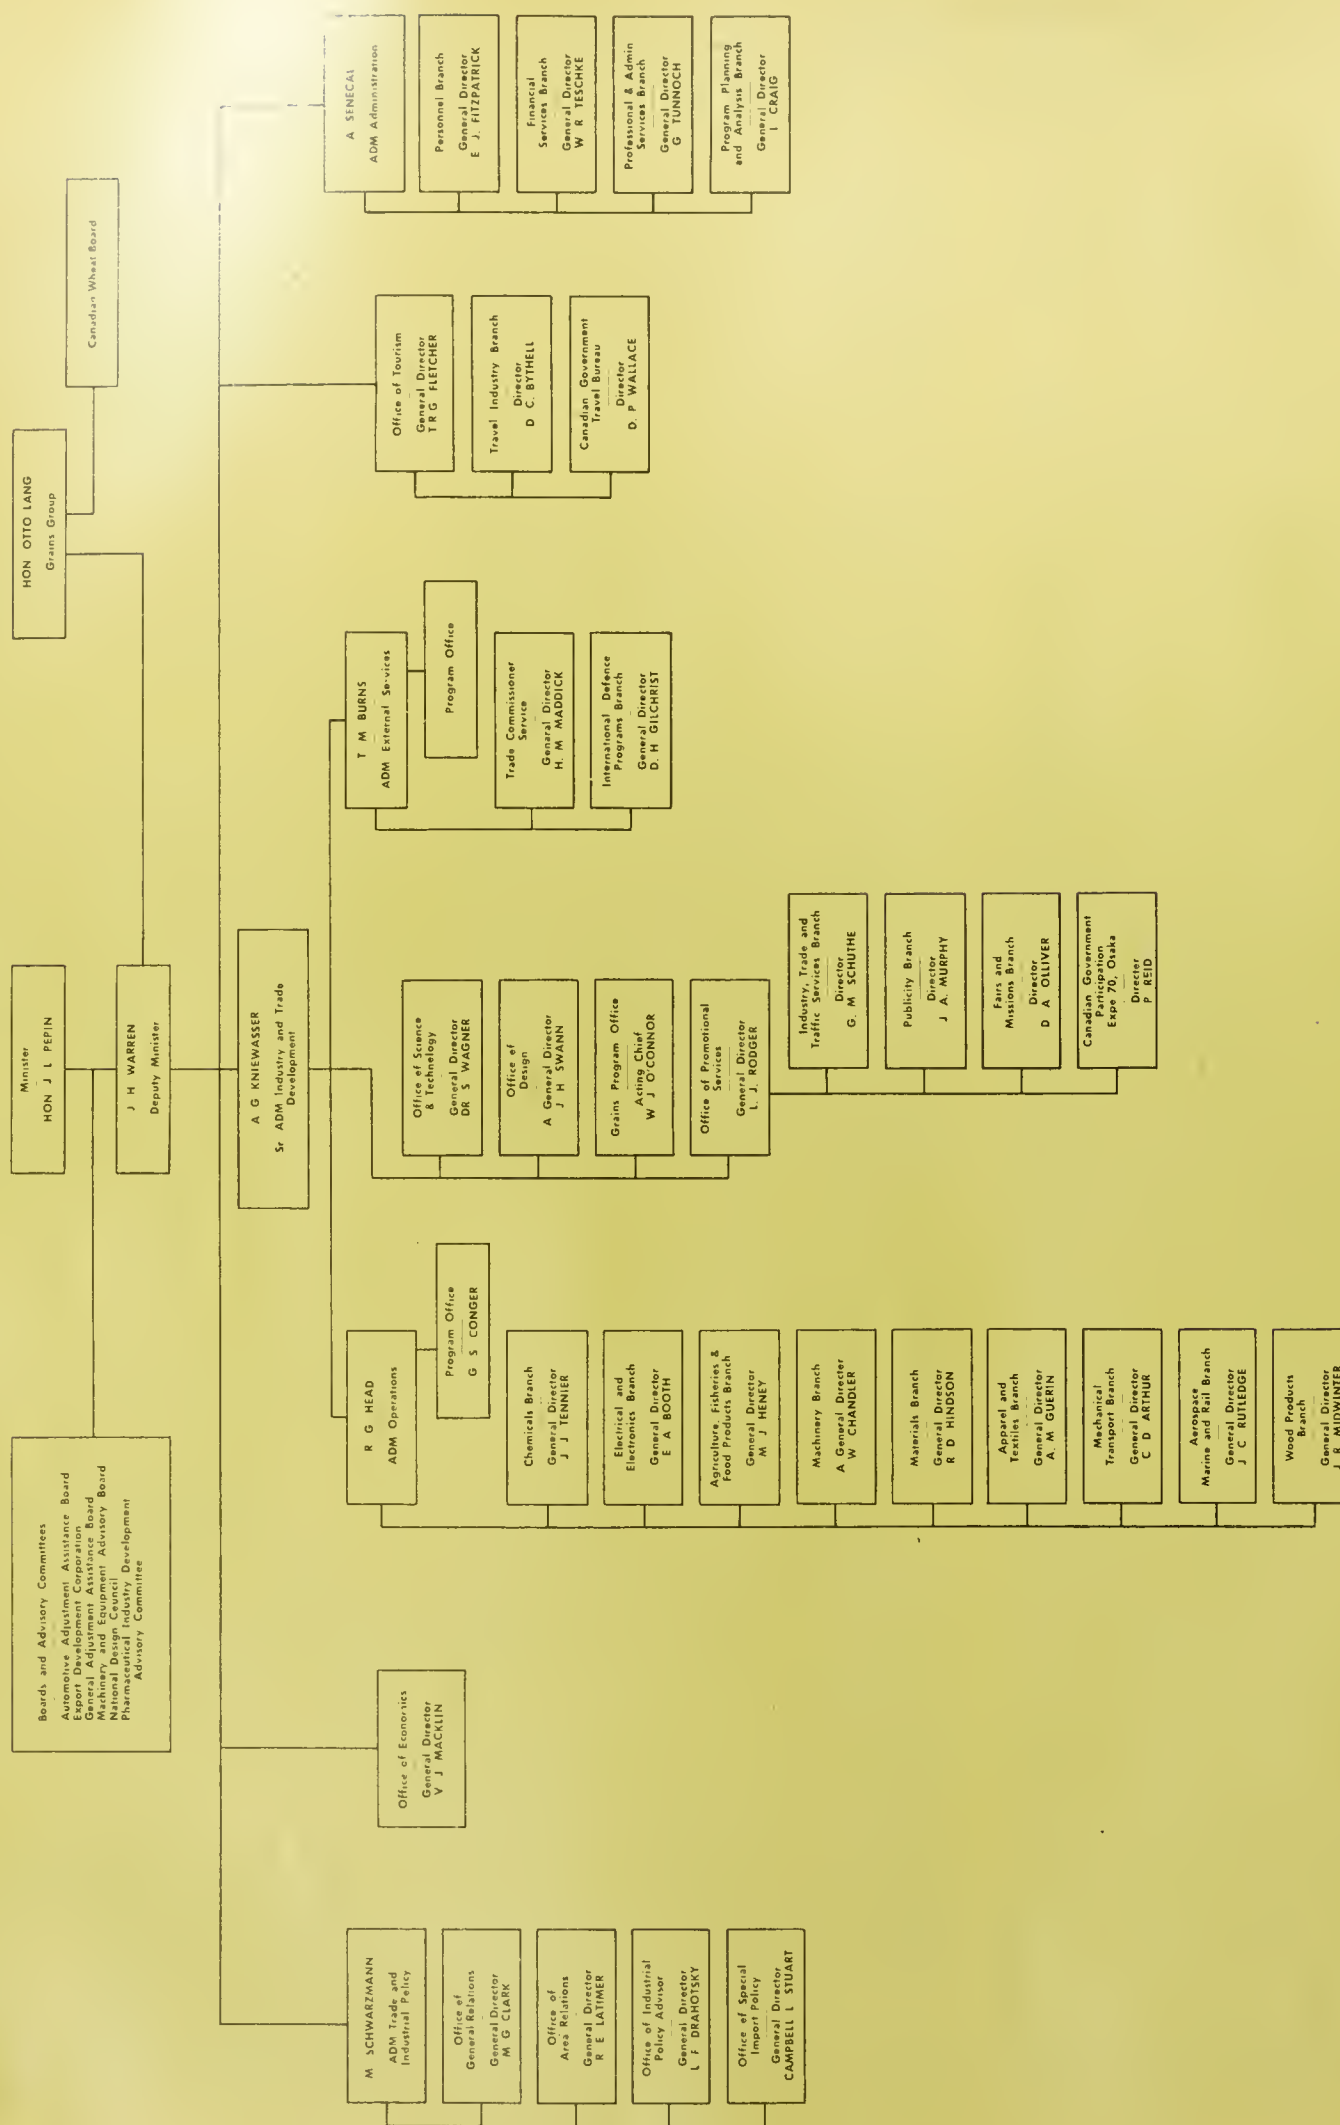

The Office of Area Relations protects and improves the access for Canadian goods to export markets. It participates in the development and conduct of Canada's external trade relations, in the formulation of Canadian trade policy and assures that account is taken of Canada's trading relationships with individual foreign countries and trading blocs when domestic economic programs are being worked out. It is concerned with tariffs and other government activities which affect international trade. As a service to Canadian exporters, it supplies details on rates of duty, import restrictions, documentation requirements, and other foreign government measures affecting Canadian exports. In addition, Canadian businessmen may obtain information on economic and trading conditions in all parts of the world and help in planning visits to these markets.

Industry, Trade and Traffic Services Branch

Industry, Trade and Traffic Services Branch consists of four divisions: Industrial Traffic Services; Export and Import Permits; Market Analysis (Import); and Industrial and Trade Enquiries.

Industrial Traffic Services Division conducts a continuing study of shipping problems which affect trade, unitized cargo concepts, air and ocean freight rates and services and air cargo utilization by geographic areas. Main purpose of the studies and other divisional activities is to provide reliable transportation at competitive rates for our external trade. Another objective is to help exporters select the most advantageous routes for moving their goods. The Division encourages further development of effective consultation machinery for shipper-shipowner negotiations and the stimulation of air cargo export traffic. It participates in international forums dealing with the movement of goods by sea.

Export and Import Permits Division administers trade controls under the authority of the federal Export and Import Permits Act. The intention of the Act is to ensure, by export control, an adequate supply and distribution in Canada of goods necessary for defence or other needs. The Act also prevents the sale of any commodity which might be detrimental to the security of Canada. Other functions of this Division are to advise exporters on interpretation and requirements of the Export Control List and Regulations, to study the economic implications of the Export and Import Permits Act and to review control lists and practices.

The Industrial and Trade Inquiries Division provides foreign-based Canadian officers and trade development officers in Canada with appropriate information about Canadian products and companies. It maintains a multi-purpose data bank of Canadian companies and their export products. The Division provides guidance in areas not related to a particular commodity, such as licensing manufacture abroad, and assists businessmen not familiar with the operations of government — directing them to the appropriate person in the department or agency.

Fairs and Missions Branch

The Fairs and Missions Branch plans, organizes and manages all Departmental promotional projects aimed at improving Canada's market development abroad. The marketing technique used is designed to fit a particular situation and ranges from participation in international trade fairs, arranging trade missions to and from Canada, organizing in-store promotions and arranging trade delegates to visit Canada on buying assignments. Canadian products are displayed in both the eastern and western hemisphere and cover a broad spectrum from communications equipment to clothing, wood products to cattle and computers to frozen foods. The decision to take part in a promotional project is made by the Departmental committee in Ottawa after the Fairs and Missions Branch presents recommendations based upon consultation and review with the Trade Commissioner Service and industry sector officers.

Normally the exhibitor pays for only a percentage of the trade fair exhibiting space, shipping his goods to and from Ottawa and providing qualified persons to staff his display. The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce provides promotional publicity, an exhibit and pays shipping costs from Ottawa to the site of the fair. Incoming and outgoing trade missions are designed to overcome such problems as distance, language and unfamiliar market practices. Although immediate sales are the goal of most missions, future sales and foreign sales outlets are objectives. Some missions are of a fact-finding nature, examining new techniques or new products that could be made in Canada.

International Defence Programs Branch

International Defence Programs Branch promotes defence export trade through marketing programs aimed at the sale of Canadian defence equipment to friendly countries and the establishment of co-operative defence industrial research, development and production arrangements with Canada's allies.

A major activity is the Canada-United States defence development and production sharing program. This entails the joint development and reciprocal procurement of defence items. To ensure maximum Canadian industrial participation in U.S. defence programs, the branch maintains offices in major cities of the United States.

Through its own representatives at Canadian Missions overseas — London, Paris, Bonn, Rome and the Canadian Delegation to NATO — the Branch is able to promote the sale of Canadian defence products and to work out cooperative arrangements with the countries to which these officers are accredited. In other friendly foreign countries, the Branch is represented by officers of the Trade Commissioner Service.

Trade Commissioner Service

The Trade Commissioner Service, the overseas arm of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, is principally concerned with promotion of Canadian exports and protection of commercial interests abroad. There are 77 Trade Offices abroad in 54 countries. These offices serve Canadian exporters by providing economic intelligence, market and credit information, contacts with buyers and agents and guidance on all aspects of selling in overseas markets.

Trade Commissioners maintain direct contact with Canadian businessmen through correspondence and periodic tours in Canada. When visiting Canada, the Trade Commissioner may be contacted through the Department at Ottawa or its Regional Offices as well as through the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, local Chambers of Commerce or Boards of Trade.

Trade Commissioners are constantly identifying new export opportunities and bringing these to the attention of Canadian suppliers. Similarly, Trade Offices abroad are prepared to respond to Canadian export inquiries with details of the extent of the market for a specific product, information on local production and imports, methods of distribution and guidance on how the market might be developed. To facilitate the Trade Commissioners' inquiries, Canadian exporters should provide as complete details as possible about the product including literature and export prices.

A complete listing of Canadian Trade Offices abroad is provided in Appendix 1.

Publicity Branch

The Publicity Branch supports foreign trade promotion programs by creating foreign consumer acceptance of and demand for Canadian products. The program of the International Division is geared to attract buyers to Canadian exhibits at trade fairs. Trade publicity officers, each a specialist in trade promotion and responsible for publicizing a group of commodities, co-ordinate a sales-oriented promotion program on behalf of Canadian manufacturers. Their techniques include providing stories and pictures to foreign news media representatives, placing advertising in foreign publications and sending promotion material such as booklets and brochures to Trade Commissioners for distribution to businessmen in their territory. In addition, a public relations firm is employed in Paris. Another service is "Canada Courier", a tabloid size newspaper which features articles and pictures about Canadian goods and services. It is published in six languages, seven editions and an annual circulation of approximately 145,000 copies mailed to potential buyers throughout the world.

Foreign Trade and Commerce Extérieur are produced by the Domestic Division and feature articles about export opportunities, changing conditions in foreign markets and how to gain access to these markets. Foreign Trade is published every two weeks, in English, has a circulation of about 5,000 and an annual subscription costs $5.00 in Canada and $7.00 outside the country. Commerce Extérieur is published once a month, in French, with an annual subscription of $2.00 in Canada and $5.00 to other countries.

Office of The Industrial Policy Adviser

The Office of Industrial Policy Adviser has overall responsibility for planning and co-ordinating the development of domestic policies and programs which affect the establishment, growth, efficiency and competitiveness of manufacturing and processing industries in Canada including their effective adjustment to changing conditions abroad as well as at home. The Office develops and maintains an up-to-date reservoir of intelligence on industrial policies in Canada and abroad and participates in work of interdepartmental and international committees dealing with industrial policy matters.

Operations Branches

The Department's nine Operations Branches, each specializing in its own commodity groupings, share in the task of maintaining close and constant liaison with Canadian industry.

Broad categories of products are assigned to each Branch: Aerospace, Marine and Rail; Agriculture, Fisheries and Food Products; Apparel and Textiles; Chemicals; Electrical and Electronics; Machinery; Materials; Mechanical Transport and Wood Products. Through the facilities provided by the Department's trade and industrial development programs, the Operations Branches endeavour to help Canadian manufacturers to improve the quality and quantity of their products and to promote the sales of those products in both domestic and world markets.

Each of these industry sector branches has responsibilities in the areas of export trade promotion and domestic industrial development. They lend assistance to Canadian companies already engaged in export activities and encourage companies with export potential to enter the highly competitive arena of international trade. Their industrial development responsibilities include conducting efficiency studies to determine the competitive capacity of Canadian manufacturers and helping companies to participate in the federal government's various research development and product innovation incentive programs.

Canadian International Development Agency

The Canadian International Development Agency through its President is responsible to the Secretary of State for External Affairs for the conduct and operation of Canada's programs of international development assistance.

Under these programs, Canada makes loans and grants, direct shipments of food and supplies, engineering services, educators and technical experts available to developing countries in Latin America, Southeast Asia, Commonwealth and Francophone Africa and the Commonwealth Caribbean. In the 1969-70 fiscal year Canadian aid allocations amounted to $338 million. This includes loans made by the Export Development Corporation to developing countries requiring financial assistance to purchase equipment from Canadian companies.

The form of CIDA's capital assistance ranges from large capital projects and a considerable quantity of raw and semi-processed industrial materials and fertilizers to small items of equipment.

When the Agency initiates procurement for recipient governments, purchase action is normally carried out on behalf of the Agency by the Canadian Commercial Corporation. In these circumstances purchasing is conducted in accordance with the procedures established by the Canadian Government Contract Regulations which, as a rule, require competitive tenders. In recent years Canada has expanded its development loan program and procurement is being directly carried out by the recipient governments and their licensed agencies. Tenders may be called directly from an approved list of suppliers in Canada or through a Canadian agency which may include the Canadian Commercial Corporation. Canadian aid financing may also be authorized as a result of an international tender call by a developing country when a Canadian supplier has been the successful bidder, or for direct purchase of commodities and industrial raw materials when prices are established by the world markets.

Each proposal is screened by CIDA to ensure that the requirement can be met from Canadian sources whose products meet the Canadian content standards. These standards have been lowered considerably in recent years to enable the recipient government to obtain the best value for its grant or loan.

The Agency also cooperates with multilateral aid-giving organizations such as the United Nations Development Program, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and development banks for various developing areas.

The Canadian International Development Agency is located at 121 Bank Street, Ottawa.

Export Development Corporation (EDC)

EDC is a Crown corporation reporting to Parliament through the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Direction of its affairs is vested in a Board which, to ensure co-operation between government and private industry, includes four directors appointed from outside the Public Service.

The purpose of EDC is to facilitate and maintain growth in the development and diversification of Canada's export trade by providing insurance, guarantees, loans and other financial facilities to meet the diverse needs of Canadian exporters. It is also empowered to provide a new service to Canadian investors in the form of foreign investment insurance.

The maximum financial liabilities EDC is empowered to undertake are:

Export Credits Insurance and Guarantees

$1,000 million ($500 million of which requires cabinet approval)

Export Financing and Guarantees

$ 800 million ($200 million of which requires cabinet approval)

Foreign Investment Insurance

$ 50 million (all of which requires cabinet approval)

EDC can insure, guarantee, or lend in respect of almost any export transaction including not only the export of goods, but also a wide range of services such as the manufacture, treatment of goods for, or the sale or leasing of goods to, a foreign customer, the sale or licensing of any right in a patent, trademark, or copyright to a foreign customer or the rendering to him of any managerial, construction, technological, marketing or other service.

Export Credits Insurance

Export credits insurance provides protection against non-payment by foreign buyers for any reason beyond the control of either the exporter or the buyer. The main risks are: insolvency by or default of the buyer; repudiation which has not resulted from a breach of contract by the exporter and where proceedings against the buyer would serve no purpose; blockage of funds or transfer difficulties; war or revolution in the buyer's country; cancellation or non-renewal of an export permit and the imposition of restrictions on the export of goods not previously subject to restriction; the incurring of additional handling, transport or other changes in respect of goods exported as a result of interruption or diversion of a voyage, and the like.

Classes of insurable transactions are:

1. Consumer goods and miscellaneous general commodities sold on short credit terms usual for a particular trade and which normally extend from Documentary Sight Draft to about six months. As a rule, whole-turnover policies are issued to cover an exporter's entire export sales for one year, excluding those made against Irrevocable Letter of Credit or those paid for in advance. Sales to buyers in the United States may be excluded. Other markets may also be excluded if those remaining offer EDC a suitable spread of risk. (Without a suitable spread of risk insurance premiums for short term business would be infinitely higher than the present average of less than one half of one percent of the invoice value of total sales.)

There are two types of consumer goods policies: a Contracts Policy which protects an exporter from the time he receives an order until he is paid and is designed to protect those exporters selling goods made to a customer's specifications; a Shipments Policy which protects an exporter from the date of shipment only.

2. Capital goods sold on medium credit terms, normally to a maximum of five years. A Specific Policy is issued to cover each contract of sale of capital goods such as plant equipment, locomotives, heavy machinery, aircraft, etc.

3. Engineering, construction, technological and contracts for other ser- vices rendered by Canadian firms to foreign customers are covered by a Services Policy, which may be of a whole-turnover or a specific type.

Insurance policies are issued on a co-insurance basis, with EDC normally assuming 90 percent of a loss under the terms and conditions of a policy.

To assist exporters in obtaining financing, EDC will agree to pay to an exporter's banker any proceeds payable under a policy. The exporter can assign an individual bill, or he can make a blanket assignment of all his foreign accounts receivable.

As a further aid in financing, EDC will provide 100 percent unconditional guarantees to banks which will agree to finance an insured medium-term export sale on a non-recourse basis.

Long Term Financing

EDC is authorized to make loans to foreign buyers for the purchase from Canada of equipment and related services for capital projects when extended credit terms — beyond five years — are required and justifiable, but commercial credit is not available. The transactions must be substantial in value, normally $1 million or more.

EDC may guarantee the payment of a promissory note or other instrument given by the foreign buyer in respect of such sales. These would normally be purchases from Canada when the buyer has obtained financing from a chartered bank or other Canadian source.

When required to do so to meet the terms offered by foreign competitors, EDC may agree to finance a portion of the local costs of a project for which it is providing the guarantee or the foreign exchange. It may also finance major engineering services, other than feasibility studies, supplied by Canadian firms even when services are not directly associated with the supply of equipment.

Lines of credit may be provided to national development banks and other similar financial institutions abroad for re-lending in their respective countries to finance the purchase of Canadian capital goods or services. Such loans are intended to assist the smaller Canadian exporter who finds it difficult to put together an individual export sale which meets the EDC $1 million minimum requirement qualification for direct export financing.

Foreign Investment Insurance

EDC may, with the approval of the Governor in Council, insure Canadian investments in foreign countries against broad non-commercial risks of loss from expropriation or confiscation, war or revolution, or the inability to repatriate capital or earnings. Initially, such insurance is restricted to lesser developed countries. To be eligible for insurance, the foreign investment must provide economic advantages to Canada such as by contributing to the growth of exports or the maintaining of markets, or it must contribute to the development of the country in which it is made. A ceiling of $50 million for liabilities under this facility is provided, and cover is restricted to a maximum of 15 years and to new investments only.

Inquiries

The Head Office of the Export Development Corporation is in Ottawa and Branches are maintained in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. It is represented by Regional Managers of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce in Halifax, Fredericton, Winnipeg, Regina and Edmonton.

Information about the wide range of services provided by the Corporation should be addressed to:

Information Department,
Export Development Corporation,
P.O. Box 655,
Ottawa, Ontario.

(See local directories for addresses of branches or representatives.)

THE DOMINION BUREAU OF STATISTICS

Looking for specialized, custom-made information on Canada's external trade? The Dominion Bureau of Statistics can meet most of your needs with special tabulations of unpublished data.

These tabulations, which can be ordered in a variety of combinations, supplement and make more meaningful the broad quantitative data which DBS publishes in its monthly, quarterly and annual commodity/country, export/import reports and advance monthly bulletins.

Of particular importance to the exporter trading in a specialized field, DBS, on request, will consider providing breakdowns of n.e.s. categories in published trade figures on a cost-recovery basis.

Currently, DBS offers special export trade tabulations, on a cost-recovery basis, in these broad categories:

1. Exports to All Countries, monthly and cumulative.
2. Re-exports to All Countries, monthly and cumulative.
3. Exports and Re-exports to All Countries, quarterly and cumulative.
4. Exports to the United States, quarterly and cumulative.

Data on exports can be tabulated by specified commodity and by province of customs clearance and, if required, by country. Tabulations can also be provided by specified country of consignment or specified province of lading. Separate tabulations can be provided for re-exports on similar bases.

In combined tabulations of exports and re-exports to all countries, data are shown by 230 commodity groups, by region of lading and by region of customs clearance. A similar service, covering domestic exports to 18 census sub-divisional regions in the United States tabulates data by 230 commodity groups, by region of lading in Canada.

For manufacturers interested in information on imports, special tabulations are also available on a monthly and cumulative basis and in forms comparable to those used for export tabulations. Other import tabulations are available by tariff item, by country. The Bureau's External Trade Division also undertakes surveys related to commodity intelligence which can be useful when considering new plant investment and for product diversification.

In addition to its publications detailing trade statistics, the Bureau produces manuals giving effect to changes in the international trade classifications. These manuals, issued annually, bring the exporter up to date on changes in export and import commodity classifications and in their numeric and alphabetic indexes.

DBS reports monthly on Canada's exports showing for each commodity listed, the total quantity and value of trade with individual countries. Quarterly reports show for each country the quantity and value of trade in each commodity. Cumulative totals only are shown in each succeeding quarterly issue. A final annual report, in three volumes, provides complete statistical detail for the year, with comparative statistics for previous years, analyses of the data, and information on tariff revenues.

The external trade publications of DBS represent one segment of a broad range of market research, production planning and other management data available from DBS in some 540 publications issued on a regular periodical basis and 600 more issued on an occasional basis. In addition, the Bureau offers a continually expanding range of unpublished data in the form of punch card decks, computer printouts and, where feasible, special tabulations to meet users' specific needs in planning marketing and production programs for particular industries.

Full details of DBS management information services are provided in the DBS catalogue and current supplements, available free on request to the Inquiries Section, Information Division, DBS, Ottawa 3. DBS regional offices in St. John's, Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, and Vancouver will also be glad to answer any inquiries you may have on DBS data services.

Industry's Smoothest Switchers

CR-8 SERIES—DIESEL-HYDRAULIC—50 to 120 tons. The CR Series features full power shifting and shaft drive, combines all the desirable features of Diesel-hydraulic drive into the best locomotive ever built for railroad, steel mill, and general switching service. The CR Series is built in 4, 6, 8, or 12 wheel configurations from 20 to 120 tons, 36" gauge and up.

Locomotives for every haulage requirement, above ground or below ground, are standard in Plymouth's expanded line—any gauge—Diesel or gasoline—with Hydraulic drive, power shift transmissions. Plymouth power can improve your operations and cut costs.

DIV. OF PATTERSON INDUSTRIES (CANADA) LTD.

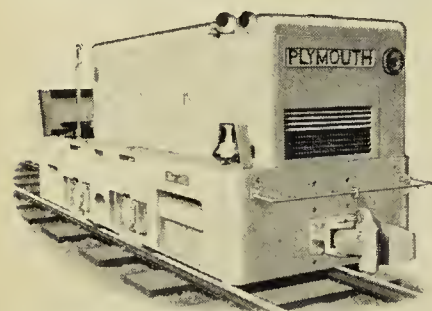

J SERIES Mine-O-Motive, 15 to 25 tons, Diesel-hydraulic with exhaust conditioner. Approved under Schedule #24 U.S. Bureau of Mines.

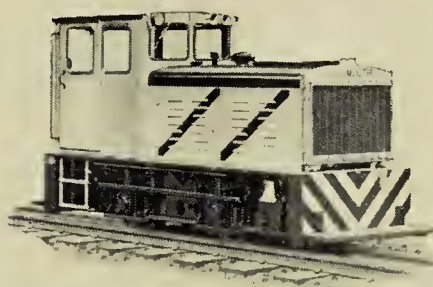

M SERIES, 25 to 45 tons, Diesel-hydraulic drive or other fuel options. This is the time-tested model for medium duty haulage.

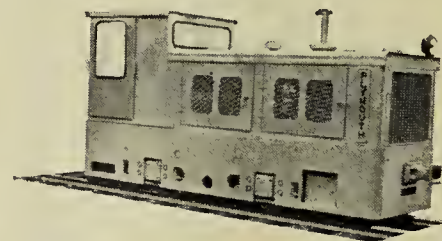

J SERIES, 14 to 25 tons, hydraulic drive—4 or 6 wheel models, a husky locomotive for use where rails may not support a heavy locomotive. Diesel, Gasoline or Propane engines.

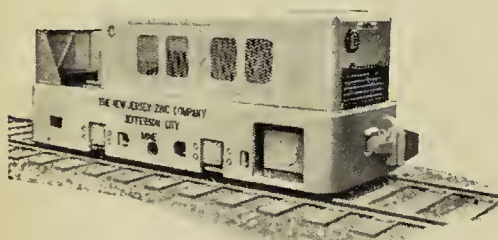

D SERIES Mine-O-Motive, 8 to 15 tons, Diesel-hydraulic with exhaust conditioner. Approved under Schedule #24 U.S. Bureau of Mines.

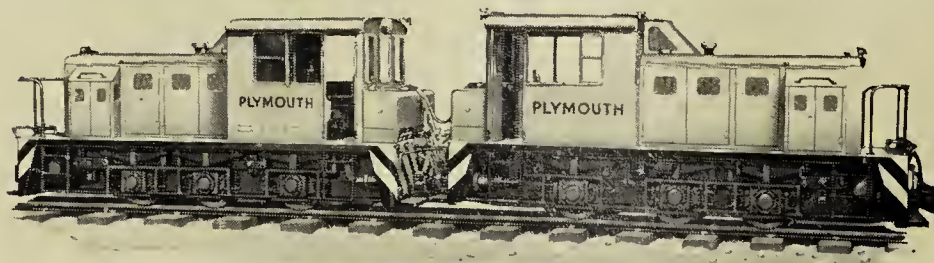

D SERIES, 8 to 16 tons, above ground version of the D Series Mine-O-Motive. Diesel-hydraulic drive or other fuels.

H SERIES, 2½ to 8 tons, Hydrostatic Drive... the "Mighty Midget" of the Plymouth fleet. Used extensively for narrow gauge switching.

HSD SERIES Mine-O-Motive, 3 to 10 tons, Diesel-Hydrostatic with exhaust conditioner. Approved under Schedule #24 U.S. Bureau of Mines.

PLYMOUTH TANDEM—W SERIES (Illustrated) 50 to 80 tons. Tandem operation available on other models along with remote or radio control. Tandem units also built in "Cow and Calf" configuration. Ideal for maximum braking effort and weight distribution on light track.

EXPLANATION OF LIST

☆ THE LIST beginning on the following page comprises the names and addresses, alphabetically arranged, of all firms appearing in the classified section of Canadian Trade Index. In this list we have tried to give the users of the book some information that will be useful in getting into quick touch with the makers of any desired article.

This list also includes an indication of the number of employees. The rating code letters following each company listing are interpreted as follows:

KEY

(A) up to 25 employees	(E) 200 to 499 employees
(B) 25 to 49 employees	(F) 500 to 999 employees
(C) 50 to 99 employees	(G) over 1,000 employees
(D) 100 to 199 employees

We have not attempted to give, in this list, any full account of the products. These will all be found under separate headings in the classified section immediately following the geographical section. Where the firm or company name does not indicate clearly the line of goods manufactured, then some of the main articles produced, or the nature of the firm's business, are mentioned.

For. Rep. means foreign representative for export sales purposes.
